U.S. Walkout Is Threatened Over Tariff

Representative Demands Progress Within 24 Hours

GENEVA (AP) — The U.S. delegation threatened today to walk out of the Kennedy Round tariff negotiations if no progress is made "within the next 24 hours," an authoritative source reported.

The source said U.S. Chief Delegate William Roth, President Johnson's special representative, made the threat in "a bellicose speech" during negotiations on grains.

The source said Roth threatened to "pack his bags and return to Washington Wednesday morning" if there is no sign of the current deadlock being broken.

Representatives of the United States and the six European Common Market nations ended a crucial night session early today without progress. A neutral mediator said if no agreement was reached later today at an expanded meeting including key members of the 52 participating nations, there was little chance of accord by week's end.

Agreement by the end of the week is considered vital because President Johnson's authority to cut American tariffs as much as 50 per cent expires June 30, and experts estimate that it will take at least six weeks to hammer the necessary accords into shape after the negotiators agree.

The stalemate could result in an emergency conference by Secretary of State Dean Rusk and foreign ministers of many of the 53 participating nations.

The key figures in the negotiations are William Roth, Johnson's special representative, and Jean Rey of Belgium, who represents the Common Market members — France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

The chief issues are reduction of tariffs on chemicals, especially the high rates charged by the United States, and regulation of trade in grain, the largest single item in the human diet.

Accord would mean an estimated reduction in tariffs averaging 30 per cent on billions of dollars in annual trade.

A successful Kennedy Round would serve as a great stimulus to trade and bring down prices on many imported goods.

If the talks fail, five years of work by thousands of experts will have been wasted and international cooperation will suffer greatly.

Judge Maris Will Hear Dispute of Michigan-Ohio

WASHINGTON (AP)—A special master has been named by the U.S. Supreme Court to hear evidence in a dispute between Michigan and Ohio over which state owns a pie-shaped, 200-square-mile area in Lake Erie. Michigan received high court permission April 17 to bring suit against Ohio in the 131-year old dispute.

Judge Albert B. Maris, who has the title of senior circuit judge, was authorized by the court Monday to fix the time and conditions for filing additional pleadings in the case and to summon witnesses in addition to taking testimony.

Maris is retired from active duty on the 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia.

Dr. Boone, 65, was answering an official call when his car was struck, police said. He suffered head injuries and shock and was admitted to Mercy Hospital. The other driver was not hurt.

Hoffa's Bid For New Trial Ends Suddenly

Lawyers Say New Evidence Has Been Found

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A hearing on James R. Hoffa's fourth bid for a new jury trial Monday ended abruptly this morning after defense lawyers said they could not proceed because of newly discovered evidence.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge Frank W. Wilson took the new trial motion under advisement after offering the defense an opportunity to present evidence and receiving no response.

The hearing, which marked Hoffa's first appearance here since he was convicted in March, 1964, lasted 45 minutes.

Hoffa's fourth new trial motion charged that the government resorted to wiretapping and eavesdropping during the trial three years ago. It was accompanied by more than 20 affidavits from persons who said they took part in the wiretapping or knew it was under way.

After the defense declined to present evidence this morning, Wilson said, "There is some question whether the affidavits have any 'legal significance'." He said the court will have to do its homework, before making a decision.

Hoffa sat impassively at the defense table throughout the hearing, looking intently at government and defense lawyers as they argued their motions. He did not consult with his lawyers.

An observer at the proceedings was James Neal of Nashville, former U.S. attorney for Middle Tennessee, who spearheaded Hoffa's prosecution in 1964.

The earlier three motions were turned down without a hearing, although one of them — accusing the jury which convicted him of misconduct — still is on appeal before the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The current new-trial motion, filed Feb. 23, accuses the gov-

Shawnee Teachers Return to Classes

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP)—Teachers at Shawnee High School in rural Clark County, who reported sick Monday, returned to classes Tuesday, averting a possible shutdown of the school.

One teacher said the teacher absence Monday was to show residents of the Springfield Local School District that the present quality of education would deteriorate rapidly if corrective measures were not taken immediately.

Cosa Nostra Men Nabbed in Raid

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — City, state and federal authorities walked into a restaurant on the city's West Side Monday night and arrested 36 men, including a dozen identified in government hearings as members of the Cosa Nostra crime syndicate.

Investigators called the gathering a "little Apalachin." All were accused of consorting with known criminals and were freed on the order of city court judges, pending arraignment today.

One of the men, police said, also was accused of second-degree assault in an attack on a policeman.

About 250 men were dining on roast beef and chicken in a first-floor banquet hall when 15 Buffalo detectives, 6 FBI agents and 2 members of the state Bureau of Criminal Investigation entered through an unlocked door.

Fifty others at the gathering, including those best known to police, were in a downstairs dining hall and slipped into a nearby liquor storeroom, locking the door behind them, police said.

They were not discovered until early today.

Investigators said some of the more prominent figures included:

Fredrico G. Raneaccio, 59, of Buffalo, reputed "underboss" to Stefano Magaddino, of nearby Lewiston. Magaddino, who has been identified at Senate crime hearings as a Cosa Nostra chieftain in western New York and the Ohio Valley, was not there.

James V. LaDuca, 55, of Lewiston, Magaddino's son-in-law and, police said, his representative at the gathering.

Joseph DiCarlo, 66, of Buffalo, who police said recently returned here from the Youngstown, Ohio, area.

Pasquale Matarella, 56, of Buffalo, described as associated with Magaddino and DiCarlo.

They Didn't Realize What Was Wrong with Serviceman

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Public Health Service official confirmed today that a Vietnam veteran was hospitalized in Texas for 16 days last fall before doctors realized he was suffering from bubonic plague.

The victim, a 21-year-old serviceman on furlough, recovered with no further complications and there was no apparent spread of the disease, Dr. David J. Sencer said in a telephone interview from Atlanta. He is head of the National Communicable Disease Center there.

"There was an element of luck," Sencer said. "If the plague had progressed into pneumonia and gotten into his bloodstream with an infection of the lung, the chances of epidemic would have been great — because he'd be coughing up phlegm."

Buffalo, reputed gambling lord. Joseph Fino, 52, and Nicholas Fino, 43, brothers from suburban West Seneca. Joseph was identified in 1963 as a section leader in the Buffalo Cosa Nostra. Nicholas has had at least 16 court appearances on gambling charges, police said, and drew a one-year sentence for possession of bookmaking records last year.

Roy Carlisi, 58, of Buffalo, who has been associated with various business ventures in the Buffalo, area, police said.

Police said several of those arrested, including LaDuca and Carlisi, were among 65 men picked up by state police in a raid Nov. 14, 1957, on the Apalachin, N.Y., home of the late Joseph Barbara during an alleged "crime convention."

Investigators said the two meetings had other similarities. In both cases, no weapons were found, however, as much as $6,000 today.

Police said many of the men tried to pay bail in cash. Under the law concerning "consorting," however, they needed the approval of a judge for their release.

Neil J. Welch, special agent in charge of the FBI in Buffalo, said he had learned of the meeting through underworld sources a few hours before the raid.

Committee Split on LBJ Rail Plans

House Hearings Opening Today May Run 3 Weeks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Commerce Committee is split at least three ways on President Johnson's recommendations to prevent a rail strike through 1968.

Administration officials headed by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz were to testify at committee hearings opening today for what may be two or three weeks. Senate hearings start Wednesday.

Democrats are divided between supporters of Johnson's plan, involving a 90-day negotiation period with a binding settlement at the end if no agreement is reached, and those who fear any such compulsory solution will suit the railroads but not the rail unions.

Many Republicans, critical of the President for dealing with only the present shopcraft dispute, may try for new procedures to deal with labor disputes throughout the transportation industry.

Chairman Harley O. Staggers, D-W.Va., who has indicated little enthusiasm for the President's plan, says he hopes the committee's deliberations can be confined to the one dispute.

"I think we better settle this first," he told a reporter. Main issue between the nation's railroads and six ship unions is money. Legislation last month averted a strike until at least June 19.

Under the President's proposal, a new 90-day no strike, no lockout period would begin and a five-member presidential board would be named. In the first 30 days, the board would engage in extensive mediation with the two parties.

If no agreement were reached, the board would hold hearings on its own proposals, deciding if no agreement is reached by the 60th day whether any modifications should be made.

If by the end of 90 days there were still no agreement, the revised recommendations would take effect, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1967, and would stay in effect until Dec. 31, 1968.

"It looks like another band-aid approach to a cancerous condition," commented Rep. Samuel L. Devine of Ohio, one of the House committee's ranking Republicans. He said it is too early to tell if GOP members will make an all-out attempt to enact more general legislation.

Vatican Permits Canon of Mass In Vernacular

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican has given the bishops of each country permission to allow the central part of the Roman Catholic Mass — the Canon — to be said in the native language instead of in Latin.

The change may begin June 29 in countries where it is approved by the national conference of bishops.

The newest liturgical change, in a decree from the Vatican Congregation of Rites approved by Pope Paul VI, also permits the native tongue to be used in ordaining priests and in the required reading by priests of the Divine Office, a series of daily prayers.

The transition from Latin to the vernacular in the Mass was recommended by the Vatican Ecumenical Council in 1963.

Lyons had provided an alibi for Welch, acquitted of the murder of tavern owner Ben Feigenbaum. Lyons and his lawyer contended the perjury charges were engineered by the Cuyahoga County prosecutor's office as "vindictive retaliation."

Dodd Assistant Denies Charges

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Albert P. Morano, chief administrative assistant to Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., has labeled as "untrue and distorted" charges that he was put on the senator's payroll while working for a Connecticut manufacturing firm.

James P. Boyd Jr., a former administrative aide to the senator, said in Washington Monday that Morano was a director of the Conetta Manufacturing Co. Inc., of Greenwich, while working for Dodd on an annual government salary of about $5,000.

Boyd's testimony previously was instrumental in the ethics committee's recommendation that Dodd be censured by the Senate.

Boyd alleged that Morano, a former Connecticut Republican congressman, had used his position as Dodd's assistant in trying to get the Department of Defense to buy from Conetta a surplus of about 85,000 trigger assemblies for the Army's M14 rifle.

Morano said he went off the payroll of Conetta the day he went to work for Dodd in August 1962.

The following month he resigned as a director of the company and this ended his relationship with the company, he said.

Thus, Morano explained, he had no connection with the company when it "requested me to enlist the aid of the senator" to get the Defense Department to

N. Carolina Enacts New Abortion Law

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Legislature has enacted a bill liberalizing the state's 86-year-old abortion law. The governor has no power of veto.

The Senate concurred Monday night in technical amendments approved by the House of Representatives, thus adopting the law.

The new abortion law is similar to one recently adopted in Colorado. It supersedes an 1881 North Carolina statute allowing abortions only if the life of the mother was in danger.

The new North Carolina law permits abortions if the mother's health would be gravely impaired by giving birth to the child; there is substantial risk the child will be born with serious mental or physical defect; the mother was raped and reported the crime to authorities within seven days; or the mother was a victim of incest.

The law also requires that three physicians not associated in practice certify that the abortion is needed and that the woman qualifies under one of the four sections.

One difference between the North Carolina law and the new Colorado statute is a North Carolina requirement that allows only emergency abortions unless the woman has been a resident of the state for four months. Colorado has no residence requirements.

The new North Carolina abortion law won House and Senate approval in most instances on voice votes. Attempts to delete sections of the bill and weaken it failed.

Hoa Lac Field Knocked Out After 5 Raids

SAIGON (AP) — Five U.S. air attacks in two weeks have put the Hoa Lac MIG air base 20 miles west of Hanoi out of action, the U.S. Command announced today.

A spokesman said there was no evidence of MIG activity on the field when nine flights of U.S. Air Force F105 Thunderchiefs from Thailand plastered the field Monday for the fifth time since April 24.

U.S. planes flew 121 missions over North Vietnam Monday, and one Thunderchief was shot down, the spokesman said. The pilot was listed as missing in action. There was no indication whether the plane was lost during the raid on the Hoa Lac field.

The Thunderchief was the 535th U.S. combat plane reported lost to hostile action over North Vietnam.

While the air war in the North increased in fury, U.S. B52 bombers blasted Communist positions within and below the demilitarized zone Monday night in a continuing campaign to ease the pressure on U.S. Marines and allied forces in the northernmost sector of South Vietnam.

"I would say the field at Hoa Lac is no longer operable," a U.S. spokesman said.

Air Force reports of Monday's raid said both ends of the hard-surface runway were pockmarked by 1,000-pound bombs, the center of the runway was blasted and the anti-aircraft sites and sandbagged MIG refueling cluster bombs.

There are four big MIG bases in the Hanoi-Haiphong area. In addition to the Hoa Lac base, the base at Kep has been hit twice but the other two have not been attacked.

While the Air Force was blasting the MIG field, Navy pilots from the nuclear-powered carrier Enterprise hit a naval supply base.

Auto Maker Ad Blamed For Playing Up to Nuts

DETROIT (AP) —The auto industry caters to the dangerous instincts of the "nut behind the wheel," then blames the driver for auto accidents, a lawyer said today.

"As psychiatrists above all others have cause to know, nuts—whether behind the wheel or anywhere else—ought to be helped, not exploited," Prof. Jeffrey O'Connell said.

His remarks were in a speech prepared for the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

The University of Illinois professor cited auto names such as Wildest, Cougar, Mustang and Barracuda to back up his point.

He quoted advertising copy describing cars that said: "All muscle and an almost neurotic urge to get going. A deep breathing, growling under the hood. Comes on like Genghis Khan."

One safe-driving pamphlet quoted by O'Connell said, "We can identify an immature driver 'without even looking-just by hearing the way he drives. A reckless or discourteous driver can be a quiet one, but usually

He suggested that officials of the psychiatric association focus on the problem and offer their research results to the auto industry.

"Ads designed to excite the most dangerous tendencies in drivers are particularly rampant in teen-age car magazines," O'Connell said.

Hoffa's Bid For New Trial Ends Suddenly

Lawyers Say New Evidence Has Been Found

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A hearing on James R. Hoffa's fourth bid for a new jury trial ended abruptly this morning after defense lawyers said they could not proceed because of newly discovered evidence.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge Frank W. Wilson took the new trial motion under advisement after offering the defense an opportunity to present evidence and receiving no response.

The hearing, which marked Hoffa's first appearance here since he was convicted in March, 1964, lasted 45 minutes.

Hoffa's fourth new trial motion charged that the government resorted to wiretapping and eavesdropping during the trial three years ago. It was accompanied by more than 20 affidavits from persons who said they took part in the wiretapping or knew it was under way.

After the defense declined to present evidence this morning, Wilson said, "There is some question whether the affidavits have any 'legal significance.'" He said the court will have to do its homework, before making a decision.

Committee Split on LBJ Rail Plans

House Hearings Opening Today May Run 3 Weeks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Commerce Committee is split at least three ways on President Johnson's recommendations to prevent a rail strike through 1968.

Administration officials headed by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz were to testify today for what may be two or three weeks. Senate hearings start Wednesday.

Democrats are divided between supporters of Johnson's plan, involving a 90-day negotiation period with a binding settlement at the end if no agreement is reached, and those who fear any such compulsory solution will suit the railroads but not the rail unions.

Many Republicans, critical of the President for dealing with only the present shopcraft dispute, may try for new procedures to deal with labor disputes throughout the transportation industry.

Chairman Harley O. Staggers, D-W.Va., who has indicated little enthusiasm for the President's plan, says he hopes the committee's deliberations can be confined to the one dispute.

"I think we better settle this first," he told a reporter. Main issue between the nation's railroads and six shop unions is money. Legislation last month averted a strike until at least June 19.

Under the President's proposal, a new 90-day no strike, no lockout period would begin and a five-member presidential board would be named. In the first 30 days, the board would engage in extensive mediation with the two parties.

If no agreement were reached, the board would hold hearings on its own proposals, deciding if no agreement is reached by the 60th day whether any modifications should be made.

If by the end of 90 days there were still no agreement, the revised recommendations would take effect, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1967, and would stay in effect until Dec. 31, 1968.

"It looks like another band-aid approach to a cancerous condition," commented Rep. Samuel L. Devine of Ohio, one of the House committee's ranking Republicans. He said it is too early to tell if GOP members will make an all-out attempt to enact more general legislation.

Vatican Permits Canon of Mass In Vernacular

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican has given the bishops of each country permission to allow the central part of the Roman Catholic Mass — the Canon — to be said in the native language instead of in Latin.

The change may begin June 29 in countries where it is approved by the national conference of bishops.

The newest liturgical change, in a decree from the Vatican Congregation of Rites approved by Pope Paul VI, also permits the native tongue to be used in ordaining priests and in the required reading by priests of the Divine Office, a series of daily prayers.

The transition from Latin to the vernacular in the Mass was recommended by the Vatican Ecumenical Council in 1963.

Man Is Acquitted Of Perjury Charge

CLEVELAND (AP)—Paul E. Lyons, 39, was acquitted after a six-day trial by a common pleas court jury Monday of perjury charges in connection with the 1965 murder trial of his fellow ironworker Alan E. Walsh.

Lyons had provided an alibi for Walsh, acquitted of the murder of tavern owner Ben Feigenbaum. Lyons and his lawyer contended the perjury charges were engineered by the Cuyahoga County prosecutor's office as "vindictive retaliation."

Dodd Assistant Denies Charges

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Albert P. Morano, chief administrative assistant to Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., has labeled as "untrue and distorted" charges that he was put on the senator's payroll while working for a Connecticut manufacturing firm.

James P. Boyd Jr., a former administrative aide to the senator, said in Washington Monday that Morano was a director of the Conetta Manufacturing Co. Inc., of Greenwich, while working for Dodd on an annual government salary of about $5,000.

Boyd's testimony previously was instrumental in the ethics committee's recommendation that Dodd be censured by the Senate.

Boyd alleged that Morano, a former Connecticut Republican congressman, had used his position as Dodd's assistant in trying to get the Department of Defense to buy from Conetta a surplus of about 85,000 trigger assemblies for the Army's M14 rifle.

Morano said he went off the payroll of Conetta the day he went to work for Dodd in August 1962.

The following month he resigned as a director of the company and this ended his relationship with the company, he said.

Thus, Morano explained, he had no connection with the company when it "requested me to enlist the aid of the senator" to get the Defense Department to buy the surplus trigger assemblies.

He said he did get the senator's help in the matter. However, the Defense Department rejected Conetta's offer on the trigger assemblies, as it had done once before.

Boyd said Monday that Dodd wrote a letter to Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara in connection with the matter.

Morano said, "Yes, I did intercede for Conetta. I wrote a memo to Sen. Dodd telling him of the situation. He said he would help."

"I was not a member of Conetta at that time," Morano said. "Every day of the week manufacturers are asking congressmen to help them."

CLEVELAND (AP)—Michigan Gov. George Romney said he made his visit to Cleveland Monday night in search of campaign funds for a probable presidential bid in 1968.

The Republican governor told newsmen at Burke Lakefront Airport and at the Hotel Sheraton-Cleveland that his speech to the Fifty Club might help generate campaign donations.

Michigan reporters who have followed Romney's cross-country search for presidential support said it was the first time the governor had conceded he was seeking campaign dollars.

In a meeting closed to newsmen and the public, Romney spoke to about 150 members and guests of the Fifty Club, a group of top civic, industrial and business leaders in Cleveland.

Club members include two long-time fund raisers for the Republican National Committee — Courtney Burton, board chairman of Oglebay Norton Co., and Charles M. White, retired board chairman of Republic Steel Corp.

Romney left Cleveland shortly after his speech. He had arrived in a twin-engine jet owned by Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co.

"I'm here to speak fundamentals," he said before the dinner meeting. He said he would spell out his position on "political, social and economic issues."

He was asked about Richard M. Nixon's statement Monday that if the former vice president were nominated by the GOP in 1968, he would win.

"Who am I to question Mr. Nixon?" was the reply.

DETROIT (AP) — The auto industry caters to the dangerous instincts of the "nut behind the wheel," then blames the driver for auto accidents, a lawyer said today.

"As psychiatrists above all others have cause to know, nuts—whether behind the wheel or anywhere else—ought to be helped, not exploited," Prof. Jeffrey O'Connell said.

His remarks were in a speech prepared for the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

The University of Illinois professor cited auto names such as Wildcat, Cougar, Mustang and Barracuda to back up his point.

He quoted advertising copy describing cars that said: "All muscle and an almost neurotic urge to get going. A deep breathing, growling under the hood. Comes on like Genghis Khan."

One safe-driving pamphlet quoted by O'Connell said, "We can identify an immature driver 'without even looking just by hearing the way he drives. A reckless or discourteous driver can be a quiet one, but usually isn't."

O'Connell, the author of several books on legal aspects of auto safety and accidents, told the psychiatrists that psychiatrists should be especially interested in this auto ad: "Drive it like you hate it; it's cheaper than psychiatry."

He suggested that officials of the psychiatric association focus on the problem and offer their research results to the auto industry.

"Ads designed to excite the most dangerous tendencies in drivers are particularly rampant in teen-age car magazines," O'Connell said.

Hoa Lac Field Knocked Out After 5 Raids

SAIGON (AP) — Five U.S. air attacks in two weeks have put the Hoa Lac MIG air base 20 miles west of Hanoi out of action, the U.S. Command announced today.

A spokesman said there was no evidence of MIG activity on the field when nine flights of U.S. Air Force F105 Thunderchiefs from Thailand plastered the field Monday for the fifth time since April 24.

U.S. planes flew 121 missions over North Vietnam Monday, and one Thunderchief was shot down, the spokesman said. The pilot was listed as missing in action. There was no indication whether the plane was lost during the raid on the Hoa Lac field.

The Thunderchief was the 535th U.S. combat plane reported lost to hostile action over North Vietnam.

While the air war in the North increased in fury, U.S. B52 bombers blasted Communist positions within and below the demilitarized zone Monday night in a continuing campaign to ease the pressure on U.S. Marines and allied forces in the northernmost sector of South Vietnam.

"I would say the field at Hoa Lac is no longer operable," a U.S. spokesman said.

Air Force reports of Monday's raid said both ends of the hard-surface runway were pockmarked by 1,000-pound bombs, the center of the runway was blasted and the anti-aircraft sites and sandbagged MIG refueling heavily raked by shattering cluster bombs.

There are four big MIG bases in the Hanoi-Haiphong area. In addition to the Hoa Lac base, the base at Kep has been hit twice but the other two have not been attacked.

While the Air Force was blasting the MIG field, Navy pilots from the nuclear-powered carrier Enterprise hit a naval supply base.

ply area choked with barges 20 miles northeast of Haiphong. The pilots said they touched off a large oil fire.

Despite a continuing overcast, other pilots ranged south to the 17th Parallel dividing Vietnam to hit supply routes, trucks, barges and other targets.

The eight-engine B52s unloaded about 500,000 pounds of bombs on suspected Red supply routes and bivouac areas in the northern half of the demilitarized zone and 11 miles northwest of Khe Sanh, just below the western end of the zone. From these areas North Vietnamese troops have made repeated attacks on U.S. Marine positions in recent weeks, and the area northwest of Khe Sanh has been hit repeatedly by the high-flying bombers.

No further fighting was reported around "Leatherneck Square," the area of four U.S. Marine outposts just south of the demilitarized zone where the Leathernecks drove off some 1,200 North Vietnamese who attacked the Con Thien camp Monday.

The U.S. Command made an upward revision of the casualty figures for both sides in the battle of Con Thien. The North Vietnamese toll increased to 197 dead, 18 more than previously announced. Allied casualties were put at 44 Marines killed, 140 U.S. troops wounded — most of them Marines — and 14 Vietnamese regulars killed and 16 wounded. This increased the number of Marine dead by nine and the number of American wounded by 41.

While no large-scale ground fighting was reported, a troop-carrying helicopter was downed near Tay Ninh City and four soldiers on board were injured.

Two other troop-carrying choppers were shot down about 30 miles northwest of Saigon, and the pilot of one was wounded. Both crafts were later flown out.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported guerrilla raiders blew up the petroleum dump at Kien Thanh, 110 miles southwest of Saigon, destroying 10,000 gallons of gasoline. The dump supplied a nearby airfield and U.S. Army helicopters in the area.

The Viet Cong also kept up their attack on the government's pacification program, killing five revolutionary development workers and wounding two others in an attack on the hamlet of Long Hai on the central coast.

"Slightly altered circumstances could have led to pneumonic plague — a true catastrophe, for pneumonic plague can spread into an epidemic, with person-to-person transmission."

The Army said the youth had been assigned to a group tearing down old rat-infested buildings in Vietnam. Fleas from infected rats apparently transmitted the disease. Hundreds of cases of plague or suspected plague have been reported among South Vietnamese.

In the interview, Sencer said the youth's illness originally was diagnosed as lymphadenitis, a swelling of lymph nodes from nonspecific infections.

The plague was not detected until a specialist was ordered to examine the youth, who had not been responding to treatment, Sencer said. After the diagnosis was confirmed, doctors at Veterans Hospital got excellent results with antibiotics and the soldier was transferred Oct. 4 to Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, Tex.

Army officials later said the youth had been free of fever since Sept. 18, but it was not known when he entered the Dallas hospital for initial treatment.

Sencer credited two previous inoculations against plague which the youth had taken in Vietnam with preventing the progression of the disease from bubonic to pneumonic plague.

"You just don't think of plague these days in the United States," the doctor said.

ply area choked with barges 20 miles northeast of Haiphong. The pilots said they touched off a large oil fire.

Despite a continuing overcast, other pilots ranged south to the 17th Parallel dividing Vietnam to hit supply routes, trucks, barges and other targets.

The eight-engine B52s unloaded about 500,000 pounds of bombs on suspected Red supply routes and bivouac areas in the northern half of the demilitarized zone and 11 miles northwest of Khe Sanh, just below the western end of the zone. From these areas North Vietnamese troops have made repeated attacks on U.S. Marine positions in recent weeks, and the area northwest of Khe Sanh has been hit repeatedly by the high-flying bombers.

No further fighting was reported around "Leatherneck Square," the area of four U.S. Marine outposts just south of the demilitarized zone where the Leathernecks drove off some 1,200 North Vietnamese who attacked the Con Thien camp Monday.

The U.S. Command made an upward revision of the casualty figures for both sides in the battle of Con Thien. The North Vietnamese toll increased to 197 dead, 18 more than previously announced. Allied casualties were put at 44 Marines killed, 140 U.S. troops wounded—most of them Marines—and 14 Vietnamese regulars killed and 16 wounded. This increased the number of Marine dead by nine and the number of American wounded by 41.

While no large-scale ground fighting was reported, a troop-carrying helicopter was downed near Tay Ninh City and four soldiers on board were injured. Two other troop-carrying choppers were shot down about 30 miles northwest of Saigon, and the pilot of one was wounded. Both crafts were later flown out.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported guerrilla raiders blew up the petroleum dump at Kien Thanh, 110 miles southwest of Saigon, destroying 10,000 gallons of gasoline. The dump supplied a nearby airfield and U.S. Army helicopters in the area.

The Viet Cong also kept up their attack on the government's pacification program, killing five revolutionary development workers and wounding two others in an attack on the hamlet of Long Hai on the central coast.

Request Made for Renewal Of Retarded Children Levy

A request seeking renewal of a .10-mill levy for continued operation of the local School for Retarded Children was submitted Monday afternoon to the Pickaway County Commissioners.

The request, forwarded by the Child Welfare Department, asked the commission to place the levy on the Nov. 7 ballot. It would run for five years if approved by voters.

A current levy for operation of the school expires this year. The commissioners took no immediate action on the renewal request. They said a decision would be made prior to the deadline for placing issues on the ballot.

ADDITIONAL commission business included approval to purchase a new cruiser for the County Sheriff's Department. The car will be obtained from Clifton Motor Sales, 1395 S. Court St.

The Oldsmobile cruiser cost was set at $2,168. A trade-in value of $1,721 was allowed for a similar model that will have 100,000 miles by the time the transaction is completed.

ernment of resorting to wiretapping and electronic eavesdropping to convict Hoffa and his codefendants of tampering with the jury which heard his 1962 conspiracy trial at Nashville, Tenn. That trial ended in a deadlocked jury.

The government has denied the charges, but said at a pre-trial conference April 21 that there would be a basis for a new trial if proven true.

Among the witnesses for Hoffa is Benjamin David Nichols of Heiskell, Tenn., an electronics expert who said he installed wiretapping devices in Hoffa's quarters under the direction of Walter Sheridan, special assistant to then-U. S. Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Sources reported that as many as 50 subpoenas had been issued by defense and government lawyers for prospective witnesses.

Hoffa began serving his eight-year sentence March 7 at the federal penitentiary in Lewisburg, Pa., while his three codefendants, Thomas Ewing Parks and Ewing King of Nashville and Larry Campbell of Detroit, began three-year terms the same day at federal prisons in Texas and Minnesota.

All are expected to testify during the hearing.

fact, sir — and remained for 16 days before the disease was suspected.

"Slightly altered circumstances could have led to pneumonic plague — a true catastrophe, for pneumonic plague can spread into an epidemic, with person-to-person transmission."

The Army said the youth had been assigned to a group tearing down old rat-infested buildings in Vietnam. Fleas from infected rats apparently transmitted the disease. Hundreds of cases of plague or suspected plague have been reported among South Vietnamese.

In the interview, Sencer said the youth's illness originally was diagnosed as lymphadenitis, a swelling of lymph nodes from nonspecific infections.

The plague was not detected until a specialist was ordered to examine the youth, who had not been responding to treatment, Sencer said. After the diagnosis was confirmed, doctors at Veterans Hospital got excellent results with antibiotics and the soldier was transferred Oct. 4 to Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, Tex.

Army officials later said the youth had been free of fever since Sept. 18, but it was not known when he entered the Dallas hospital for initial treatment.

Sencer credited two previous inoculations against plague which the youth had taken in Vietnam with preventing the progression of the disease from bubonic to pneumonic plague.

"You just don't think of plague these days in the United States," the doctor said.

Are you one of the 6 out of 10?
63% of American families are homeowners!
This represents an increase of 20% since 1940!
The reason for this rapid increase is quite simple. Real estate prices are stabilizing, buyers may choose from a wide selection of homes, and favorable terms are being offered by mortgage lenders with ample funds to loan. Perhaps it's time that you consider the advantages of home ownership! Chances are, your monthly payments might even be less than you are presently paying for rent. We have several very attractive listings... some with low down payments. We'd like to show them to you.

Ohio's Mental Health Program Begins To Look Somewhat Better

By William E. Bierman

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's mental health program, curtailed by Gov. James A. Rhodes' austerity program, may now benefit from bigger payrolls and—some day—a building boom.

Rhodes began his economy-minded first term by eliminating several hundred jobs at the mental institutions, which already had a history of low pay, understaffing and rapid turnover of employees.

Those problems persist today, but mental health officials are reluctant to criticize the governor. They claim progress is slow but sure, and they pin their hopes on legislation in the works.

"There hasn't been the improvement we hoped for," says Thomas Nichols, president of the Ohio Mental Health Federation, "but the legislature is definitely on the right track."

A bill has passed the Ohio Senate that would grant ten percent pay raises—higher in individual cases—to all state employees. Beginning salaries for nurses and hospital attendants will be raised considerably.

Enactment of the raises would "bring us up to very competitive levels," says Dr. Martin A. Janis, director of the Department of Mental Hygiene and Correction.

Janis, who supervises some 20 hospitals as well as the state's penal institutions, admits that "our biggest problem in the state of Ohio has been lack of competitive salaries."

He noted a substantial rise in the number of full-time psychiatrists at state hospitals—from 192 in 1962 to 288 at present.

There have been small increases in the number of social workers, psychologists, teachers, therapists and chaplains, and slight decreases in nurses and medical doctors.

"It isn't all money," adds Mrs. Marion Wells, director of the Ohio Mental Health Association. She said the national shortage of trained professionals results in each state's raiding the others.

The worst headache, however, is the chronic shortage and high turnover among non-professionals—custodial and maintenance workers, ward attendants, laundry and cafeteria personnel.

Cincinnati attorney Harry McIlwain, a frequent critic of the state hospitals, charges attendants "are getting starvation wages when they ought to be getting combat pay."

McIlwain, who ran unsuccessfully in the Democratic primary for governor last year, has kept a close watch on the big Longview State Hospital in Cincinnati.

He prompted a grand jury investigation there in 1966 after the parents of a 28-year-old patient claimed he had been badly beaten. Stories of sexual assaults on new inmates also circulated.

The jury exonerated the hospital of the charges, but called for more funds to increase the staff. The hospital's head was assigned to a new position a month later, although state officials denied any connection.

The Mental Health Federation's Nichols said ward attendants were leaving Longview for Indiana, where salaries averaged $100 more a month last year.

A state official complained it was difficult to hold attendants and secretaries "when girls out of high school and business college are being offered $100 a month more by private firms."

Current salary ranges for ward attendants are from $252 to $276 per month, although the senate's new pay bill would boost the base wage over $300. Turnover among attendants runs as high as 25 per cent a month.

Nurses without previous experience have a base pay of $315 per month, expected to be raised to about $400 under the new bill.

The governor's 1963 austerity program, engineered by Finance Director Richard Krabach, included layoffs and a freeze on employment.

The problem, however, was of longer standing. Total employment in the Department of Mental Hygiene and Correction—which had once reached 19,000—had begun to dwindle earlier and dipped to 14,000 in 1963.

It is now back to 16,000, and expected to increase further.

In 1961, officials had to lay off nearly 180 "higher classification" employees—nurses, social workers and psychologists—to afford hiring laundry and cafeteria workers.

Lack of funds in 1961—as

Democratic Gov. Michael DiSalle battled a Republican-dominated finance committee—prompted an employment freeze in the mental hygiene division which eliminated more than 600 jobs.

In 1959 DiSalle had criticized his mental hygiene director—a holdover from the previous GOP administration—for the "soiled linens, stained mattresses, greasy kitchen utensils, encrusted ovens, slimy—feeling dishes and silverware" at the Columbus mental hospital.

"Our total number of employees today would be close to what it was in 1962," says Director Janis, "even though our total population in the hospitals has decreased."

That has come about, he said, because improved treatment methods have shortened the average stay, and because more persons are being cared for on an out-patient basis.

The mental health department's proposed operating budget for the 1967-68 biennium is more than $199 million, although still subject to legislative trimming. The present two-year budget is $149 million.

Before the defeat of the Ohio Bond Commission in the May 2 primary, Gov. Rhodes had outlined a six-year capital improvements program for mental facilities totaling $358 million.

The program called for $70.9 million for community mental health centers in all sections of the state, $80 million for mental retardation centers, and nearly $198 million for improvements at existing hospitals and prisons.

With the defeat of OBC, which would have provided Ohio's part of the state-federal financing, any such attractive plans will have to find backing somewhere else.

"Of course we were disappointed," said Janis after the election. "We need quite an amount just to replace old buildings."

Further, he said, "programs of the future are going to be community oriented." He said the state must have capital financing to aid localities in setting up mental health centers.

"I'm going to do everything I can to discuss this need of ours and emphasize its importance," the director said.

Summing up the capital improvements dilemma, Janis noted that "buildings should be correlated to treatment." Staying abreast of needs has never yet been possible, however.

"We're always trying to catch up," Janis said.

Dear Abby: Everyone Defines 'Love' for Himself

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps I was born in the wrong era. My daughter and son-in-law have been married almost 4 years. Believe me, she was "raised right"—wanted for nothing, and went to the finest schools, but something went wrong.

She has "fallen in love" with another man, which I suppose can happen. And it is all right with us if she would divorce her husband and marry the other man. But no, she stays married, and continues to "go with" her lover.

Her husband knows all about it and apparently doesn't care. Where is his pride? We have spoken to our daughter about it since she goes around openly with this other man, and there is talk. She says she "loves" them both. How can a woman love two men? This doesn't make sense to me. Should we close our eyes and just let them go on this way?

DISGRACED
DEAR DISGRACED: Let them. There is nothing you can do. Each must define "love" for himself. There have always been those who play the game of "love" according to their own rules, but they can "disgrace" only themselves.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think a girl is ever justified in proposing marriage during Leap year?

E. L. D.
DEAR E. L. D.: Positively! During Leap year, and during any other year. However, in all fairness to the girls who do the asking, I should add, no man ever marries a girl because she asks him. He just marries her sooner.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have some friendly neighbors I'll call Jack and Judy. We have dinner together a couple of times a week. When the four of us are together we have a fine time, but as soon as I go into the kitchen to help Judy with the dishes, Jack leaves my husband to make a phone call which can last an hour, or he'll go play with the children or the dog. He never seems to have anything to say to my husband. They are both in the same line of work so it's not like they have nothing in common.

It's getting so my husband doesn't care to go over there anymore. Should I tell Judy to tell Jack to pay more attention to my husband. Or should I tell Jack myself? How should this be handled?

BOTHERED
DEAR BOTHERED: Don't tell anybody anything. If your husband "doesn't care to go over there anymore," and you are concerned about Jack's attitude, you're not likely to have a "fine time together" much longer. Perhaps you should visit less with this couple and enjoy it more.

CONFIDENTIAL to La Verne and Luigi on North Saltair: You two could give the world a lesson on how to succeed in marriage without even trying. Yours is a beautiful example of total commitment thru unselfish love.

40 IBEW Workers Resign Positions

NEWARK, Ohio (AP)—About 40 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) in Newark and the Licking County area whose contract expires June 1 resigned effective Monday.

Clarence Geidenburger, president of Local 1105, emphasized that it is not a strike, which is forbidden under the prevailing contract, and said there would be no picketing.

Geidenburger said the electricians, whose action affected projects totaling several million dollars in the area, are seeking $5.18 an hour, which he described as the prevailing average rate for electricians in the state.

Ohio's Mental Health Program Begins To Look Somewhat Better

By William E. Bierman

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's mental health program, curtailed by Gov. James A. Rhodes' austerity program, may now benefit from bigger payrolls and—someday—a building boom.

Rhodes began his economy-minded first term by eliminating several hundred jobs at the mental institutions, which already had a history of low pay, understaffing and rapid turnover of employees.

Those problems persist today, but mental health officials are reluctant to criticize the governor. They claim progress is slow but sure, and they pin their hopes on legislation in the works.

"There hasn't been the improvement we hoped for," says Thomas Nichols, president of the Ohio Mental Health Federation, "but the legislature is definitely on the right track."

A bill has passed the Ohio Senate that would grant ten percent pay raises—higher in individual cases—to all state employees. Beginning salaries for nurses and hospital attendants will be raised considerably.

Enactment of the raises would "bring us up to very competitive levels," says Dr. Martin A. Janis, director of the Department of Mental Hygiene and Correction.

Janis, who supervises some 20 hospitals as well as the state's penal institutions, admits that "our biggest problem in the state of Ohio has been lack of competitive salaries."

He noted a substantial rise in the number of full-time psychiatrists at state hospitals—from 192 in 1962 to 288 at present.

There have been small increases in the number of social workers, psychologists, teachers, therapists and chaplains, and slight decreases in nurses and medical doctors.

"It isn't all money," adds Mrs. Marion Wells, director of the Ohio Mental Health Association. She said the national shortage of trained professionals results in each state's raiding the others.

The worst headache, however, is the chronic shortage and high turnover among non-professionals—custodial and maintenance workers, ward attendants, laundry and cafeteria personnel.

Cincinnati attorney Harry McIlwain, a frequent critic of the state hospitals, charges attendants "are getting starvation wages when they ought to be getting combat pay."

McIlwain, who ran unsuccessfully in the Democratic primary for governor last year, has kept a close watch on the big Longview State Hospital in Cincinnati.

He prompted a grand jury investigation there in 1966 after the parents of a 28-year-old patient claimed he had been badly beaten. Stories of sexual assaults on new inmates also circulated.

The jury exonerated the hospital of the charges, but called for more funds to increase the staff. The hospital's head was assigned to a new position a month later, although state officials denied any connection.

The Mental Health Federation's Nichols said ward attendants were leaving Longview for Indiana, where salaries averaged $100 more a month last year.

A state official complained it was difficult to hold attendants and secretaries "when girls out of high school and business college are being offered $100 a month more by private firms."

Current salary ranges for ward attendants are from $252 to $276 per month, although the senate's new pay bill would boost the base wage over $300. Turnover among attendants runs as high as 25 per cent a month.

Nurses without previous experience have a base pay of $315 per month, expected to be raised to about $400 under the new bill.

The governor's 1963 austerity program, engineered by Finance Director Richard Krabach, included layoffs and a freeze on employment.

The problem, however, was of longer standing. Total employment in the Department of Mental Hygiene and Correction—which had once reached 19,000—had begun to dwindle earlier and dipped to 14,000 in 1963.

It is now back to 16,000, and expected to increase further.

In 1961, officials had to lay off nearly 180 "higher classification" employees—nurses, social workers and psychologists—to afford hiring laundry and cafeteria workers.

Lack of funds in 1961 — as

Democratic Gov. Michael DiSalle battled a Republican-dominated finance committee — prompted an employment freeze in the mental hygiene division which eliminated more than 600 jobs.

In 1959 DiSalle had criticized his mental hygiene director—a holdover from the previous GOP administration — for the "soiled linens, stained mattresses, greasy kitchen utensils, encrusted ovens, slimy - feeling dishes and silverware" at the Columbus mental hospital.

"Our total number of employees today would be close to what it was in 1962," says Director Janis, "even though our total population in the hospitals has decreased."

That has come about, he said, because improved treatment methods have shortened the average stay, and because more persons are being cared for on an out-patient basis.

The mental health department's proposed operating budget for the 1967-69 biennium is more than $199 million, although still subject to legislative trimming. The present two-year budget is $149 million.

Before the defeat of the Ohio Bond Commission in the May 2 primary, Gov. Rhodes had outlined a six-year capital improvements program for mental facilities totaling $338 million.

The program called for $70.9 million for community mental health centers in all sections of the state, $89 million for mental retardation centers, and nearly $198 million for improvements at existing hospitals and prisons.

With the defeat of OBC, which would have provided Ohio's part of the state-federal financing, any such attractive plans will have to find backing somewhere else.

"Of course we were disappointed," said Janis after the election. "We need quite an amount just to replace old buildings."

Further, he said, "programs of the future are going to be community oriented." He said the state must have capital financing to aid localities in setting up mental health centers.

"I'm going to do everything I can to discuss this need of ours and emphasize its importance," the director said.

Summing up the capital improvements dilemma, Janis noted that "buildings should be correlated to treatment." Staying abreast of needs has never yet been possible, however. "We're always trying to catch up," Janis said.

Dear Abby:

Everyone Defines 'Love' for Himself

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps I was born in the wrong era. My daughter and son-in-law have been married almost 4 years. Believe me, she was "raised right" — wanted for nothing, and went to the finest schools, but something went wrong.

She has "fallen in love" with another man, which I suppose can happen. And it is all right with us if she would divorce her husband and marry the other man. But no, she stays married, and continues to "go with" her lover.

Her husband knows all about it and apparently doesn't care. Where is his pride? We have spoken to our daughter about it since she goes around openly with this other man, and there is talk. She says she "loves" them both. How can a woman love two men? This doesn't make sense to me. Should we close our eyes and just let them go on this way?

DISGRACED

DEAR DISGRACED: Let them. There is nothing you can do. Each must define "love" for himself. There have always been those who play the game of "love" according to their own rules, but they can "disgrace" only themselves.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think a girl is ever justified in proposing marriage during Leap year?

E. L. D.

DEAR E. L. D.: Positively! During Leap year, and during any other year. However, in all fairness to the girls who do the asking, I should add, no man ever marries a girl because she asks him. He just marries her sooner.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have some friendly neighbors I'll call Jack and Judy. We have dinner together a couple of times a week. When the four of us are together we have a fine time, but as soon as I go into the kitchen to help Judy with the dishes, Jack leaves my husband to make a phone call which can last an hour, or he'll go play with the children or the dog. He never seems to have anything to say to my husband. They are both in the same line of work so it's not like they have nothing in common.

It's getting so my husband doesn't care to go over there anymore. Should I tell Judy to tell Jack to pay more attention to my husband, or should I tell Jack myself? How should this be handled?

BOTHERED

DEAR BOTHERED: Don't tell anybody anything. If your husband "doesn't care to go over there anymore," and you are concerned about Jack's attitude, you're not likely to have a "fine time together" much longer. Perhaps you should visit less with this couple and enjoy it more.

CONFIDENTIAL to La Verne and Luigi on North Saltair: You two could give the world a lesson on how to succeed in marriage without even trying. Yours is a beautiful example of total commitment thru unselfish love.

63% of American families are homeowners!

This represents an increase of 20% since 1940! The reason for this rapid increase is quite simple. Real estate prices are stabilizing, buyers may choose from a wide selection of houses, and favorable terms are being offered by mortgage lenders with ample funds to loan. Perhaps it's time that you consider the advantages of home ownership! Chances are, your monthly payments might even be less than you are presently paying for rent. Trimming Troops

Projected withdrawal of 35,000 American troops and supporting Air Force squadrons from West Germany has been the subject of patient negotiation with the Bonn government and other members of the NATO alliance for some time. Most top U. S. military men oppose the move.

A pullout of some forces appeared possible in the fall of 1963, when U. S. Operation Big Lift demonstrated the ability to transfer an armored division of 15,337 men and 423 tons of battle equipment from Texas to Germany in 63 hours.

But Washington was not ready to take the calculated risk, and the full quota of 230,000 men, their equipment and their dependents stayed on in West Germany. With them remained a drain on the balance of payments approaching a half billion dollars a year.

Doubtless other than economic considerations influenced the decision to remove the equivalent of two U. S. divisions and four aerial squadrons from Germany at this time. But there has been no word that the U. S. move will be followed by a scaling down of communist bloc forces in Eastern Europe.

The Business World

By John Cuniff

NEW YORK (AP) — The Johnson administration has reaffirmed its intention of seeking a 6 per cent surtax on income taxes sometime later this year despite broad opposition from business, economists, and workers.

This insistence on the surtax has been a real puzzle for months now. It is also a power-actuality. But what is it for?

Is it to pay for a hoped-for increase in Social Security benefits. To reduce the threat of inflation. To demonstrate fiscal responsibility. To pay for a possible further escalation of the war in Vietnam.

A great many people feel the surtax proposal is uncalled for on strictly economic grounds. John Connor, Johnson's former commerce secretary, was among the latest to urge the President to withdraw his proposal. But nothing has dissuaded Johnson.

Last week he told a news conference that "at the appropriate time, we hope that the situation will be compelling and persuasive even to those who have their doubts now." The tax would provide needed revenue, he said.

The theory was that since Johnson wanted a big increase in Social Security benefits he had to demonstrate a method of payment or see his proposal trimmed. A surtax would fulfill the requirement.

The inflation theory, meanwhile, has developed.

Gardner Ackley, chief economic advisor, has chosen the current economic pause to warn of rising prices. Because of the possible threat, he said, wage-price guideposts might be reactivated.

This argument, although well reasoned, seems to come out of a blue sky. Rampant inflation is only a threat. There is no certainty that the economy will turn upward or that we'll have inflation needing a tax dampener.

In fact, the administration and the Federal Reserve Board have actually been doing the opposite of dampening; they have been stimulating the civilian economy.

It is perhaps too easy to say that the rising costs of Vietnam are behind this fear. Nevertheless, it is becoming clear that the war is going to cost more than the $21.9 billion estimated in the 1968 budget. Vietnam is inflationary.

In addition, published reports have not been specifically denied forsee a buildup from the present 440,000 troops to 600,000 in 1968.

Such a costly buildup was not anticipated in the budget. There is little room for error.

In reply to questions at a news conference, Johnson said, "I do not consider anything immediately imminent; in the next few days or even the next few weeks." But what about the next six months?

If such a buildup does become part of our military strategy it could coincide with an expansion of the civilian economy, an expansion that the administration has been promoting and which is widely forecast. It would come also at a time when unions will be pushing for big wage increases.

Such ingredients as an expanding economy and big wage increases probably could be accommodated without inflation. But, add the costs of an escalated war and it becomes a volatile mixture that could explode into inflation.

Here Comes the Mailman

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Some six million Americans suffer from sinus trouble.

Only 37 per cent of motorists say they "always" wear seat belts on trips of 25 miles or less from their homes. Yet it is within this radius that four out of five traffic accidents occur.

It has been estimated that one out of 19 U.S. citizens spends $30 a year on unnecessary vitamins or fadish health foods. On the other hand, a medical scientist warns that wives may lose a husband by giving him an inadequate breakfast: "The poor breakfast may lead to a higher divorce rate because it increases irritability."

What is probably now the most popular of all vegetables in the United States? It is the tomato, which is technically a fruit. During colonial times it was called "the love apple," and widely regarded as poisonous.

Quotable notables: "Man wants a great deal here below, and woman even more." — James Thurber.

A Canadian bank tried to lure women depositors by offering perfumed checkbooks. But they'll never make anything that smells better to most people than good old cash.

Uncle Sam is the world's greatest record keeper. Each year the federal government adds about 175 billion sheets of paper to its files.

Actor Eli Wallach says, "If you want to know the value of money, just try to borrow a buck from your teen-age son."

Why do new cars have to be called back to the factory? Experts explain that cars have an average of 15,000 parts, and each part has some 100 characteristics to be tested. That means there are 1.5 million chances for error in every car that comes off the assembly line.

Approximately 50 per cent of America's working population now carry their lunch to work.

Americans still take 34 million pounds of snuff a year. It is popular with employees in factories where smoking would be dangerous.

It was playwright Channing Pollock who observed, "A critic is a legless man who teaches running."

These are the steps to be taken: (1) Place the victim on his back face up. Loosen belts, ties, girdles and other constrictions. (2) Be sure that the victim's mouth is empty and the tongue has not fallen back into the throat. Tilt the victim's head back as far as possible and pull the jaw upward.

(3) Open the mouth if possible. When the jaws are rigid and tight, separate the lips. In this way air can be forced between the teeth by the rescuer's breathing.

(4) Now take a deep breath and place your mouth securely over the victim's mouth and forcefully blow your life-saving oxygen into him. Repeat this cycle rhythmically and regularly at your normal breathing rate.

For an adult blow about 12 to 18 times per minute. For a small child blow more gently and more quickly, about 20 times a minute.

The rescuer must remain calm and continue this procedure without hurry. If he breathes too deeply or too rapidly he may become dizzy and exhausted. When possible, more than one person should relieve each other to avoid fatigue.

If you feel uncomfortable about direct contact with the mouth of the victim cover it with a handkerchief. The air will get through.

(5) While doing this, be sure that there is no leakage of air through the victim's nose. For through the victim's nose. For through the victim's nose. For through the victim's nose.

(6) Send for professional help as quickly as possible, but do not leave the victim to do so. The resuscitation must continue uninterrupted.

Do not stop or become discouraged if the victim does not respond quickly. A doctor may give stimulating drugs in addition to this method of artificial help. Drugs, however, are not nearly as important as the air you are breathing into him.

The key points to be remembered are: don't delay, send for help, tilt the head far backwards, lift the jaw upward and begin mouth-to-mouth aid immediately.

You, too, may share the joy of saving a life if you are prepared to do so.

When you recover from a disease think of yourself as healthy, not as an invalid.

A RESIGNED prisoner, in for a twenty-year rap, suffered some injuries in the shop and had to undergo abdominal surgery in the prison hospital. Back on his feet, he was summoned by the warden.

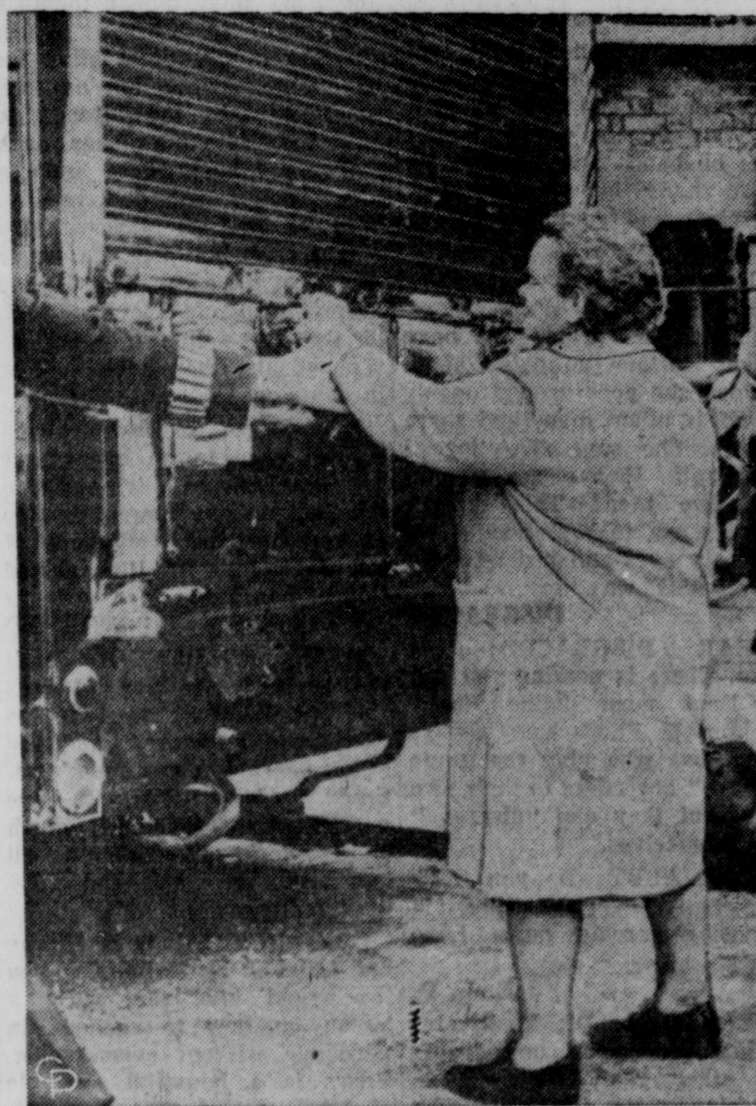

"It says in this report," said the warden with a scowl, "that you had two toes amputated and also lost three fingers in an accident in the shop. I gather, too, that they just removed your appendix. Well, let me tell you this, smart guy," he concluded with a roar. "You're not putting anything over on me. If you believe you can sneak yourself out of this jail a piece at a time, you've got another thing coming!"

A brassy young lady phoned the maitre d' at an exclusive restaurant and asked if she could enter wearing pants. "Only, miss," he answered haughtily, "if you are a lamb chop."

John Q. Henpeck was mighty disappointed when his wife presented him with a baby daughter. As he explained to an office mate, "I was hoping for a boy to help me with the housework."

Speaking of YOUR HEALTH...

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

A heart-warming story was reported in the newspapers recently. A small child had fallen into a pond and, even though he was brought out quickly, he seemed to be lifeless. An elderly man immediately took charge and breathed life into this youngster, doing it with dispatch and knowledge of the technique.

He later said, "I never expected to use it, but I'm most grateful that I had learned how to do mouth-to-mouth resuscitation." He further said, "Saving this boy's life was a gift granted to me that I will treasure for the rest of my life."

Almost everyone can learn the simple, basic rules that may prevent a calamity and save a life. The basic principle is simple. Mouth-to-mouth resuscitation forces the recuer's breath and oxygen into the lungs of the victim and keeps him alive.

These are the steps to be taken: (1) Place the victim on his back face up. Loosen belts, ties, girdles and other constrictions. (2) Be sure that the victim's mouth is empty and the tongue has not fallen back into the throat. Tilt the victim's head back as far as possible and pull the jaw upward.

(3) Open the mouth if possible. When the jaws are rigid and tight, separate the lips. In this way air can be forced between the teeth by the rescuer's breathing.

Friend at Chase Manhattan

By John Chamberlain

Nothing is simple. It was only a few weeks back that a story appeared in the papers about an agreement between the Cyrus Eaton interests of Cleveland and the Rockefellers to seek new ways of exploiting East-West trade. The "Rockefellers," of course, are, among other things, the Chase Manhattan Bank. If the Soviets had found a friend at the Chase Manhattan, they were presumably "in." And, to those of us who think it would be a mistake to extend any out-of-the-ordinary long-term credits to a totalitarian government with a deplorable record for double-dealing, this could have meant the ball game.

The Soviets' presumed "friend at the Chase Manhattan," however, turns out to be a most canny fellow who does not believe in indiscriminately casting his bread on stormy waters. Recently the Chase polled 500 academic economists on the idea of relaxing curbs on trade with the Communist East. Four out of five of the economists were for increased trading with the Russians and the East European satellites. Three out of five thought some dealings with Red China should be permitted.

Strangely, almost half of the economists based their recommendations on political considerations, not economic. They were moving out of their field into the mysterious realm of diplomacy, which economists do not normally study.

Trimming Troops

Projected withdrawal of 35,000 American troops and supporting Air Force squadrons from West Germany has been the subject of patient negotiation with the Bonn government and other members of the NATO alliance for some time. Most top U. S. military men oppose the move.

A pullout of some forces appeared possible in the fall of 1963, when U. S. Operation Big Lift demonstrated the ability to transfer an armored division of 15,337 men and 423 tons of battle equipment from Texas to Germany in 63 hours.

But Washington was not ready to take the calculated risk, and the full quota of 230,000 men, their equipment and their dependents stayed on in West Germany. With them remained a drain on the balance of payments approaching a half billion dollars a year.

Doubtless other than economic considerations influenced the decision to remove the equivalent of two U. S. divisions and four aerial squadrons from Germany at this time. But there has been no word that the U. S. move will be followed by a scaling down of communist bloc forces in Eastern Europe.

The Business World

By John Cuniff

NEW YORK (AP) — The Johnson administration has reaffirmed its intention of seeking a 6 per cent surtax on income taxes sometime later this year despite broad opposition from business, economists, and workers.

This insistence on the surtax has been a real puzzle for months now. It is also a power-actuality. But what is it for?

Is it to pay for a hoped-for increase in Social Security benefits. To reduce the threat of inflation. To demonstrate fiscal responsibility. To pay for a possible further escalation of the war in Vietnam.

A great many people feel the surtax proposal is uncalled for on strictly economic grounds. John Connor, Johnson's former commerce secretary, was among the latest to urge the President to withdraw his proposal. But nothing has dissuaded Johnson.

Last week he told a news conference that "at the appropriate time, we hope that the situation will be compelling and persuasive even to those who have their doubts now." The tax would provide needed revenue, he said.

The theory was that since Johnson wanted a big increase in Social Security benefits he had to demonstrate a method of payment or see his proposal trimmed. A surtax would fulfill the requirement.

The inflation theory, meanwhile, has developed.

Gardner Ackley, chief economic advisor, has chosen the current economic pause to warn of rising prices. Because of the possible threat, he said, wage-price guideposts might be reactivated.

This argument, although well reasoned, seems to come out of a blue sky. Rampant inflation is only a threat. There is no certainty that the economy will turn upward or that we'll have inflation needing a tax dampener.

In fact, the administration and the Federal Reserve Board have actually been doing the opposite of dampening; they have been stimulating the civilian economy.

It is perhaps too easy to say that the rising costs of Vietnam are behind this fear. Nevertheless, it is becoming clear that the war is going to cost more than the $21.9 billion estimated in the 1968 budget. Vietnam is inflationary.

In addition, published reports have not been specifically denied forsee a buildup from the present 440,000 troops to 600,000 in 1968.

Such a costly buildup was not anticipated in the budget. There is little room for error.

In reply to questions at a news conference, Johnson said, "I do not consider anything immediately imminent; in the next few days or even the next few weeks." But what about the next six months?

If such a buildup does become part of our military strategy it could coincide with an expansion of the civilian economy, an expansion that the administration has been promoting and which is widely forecast. It would come also at a time when unions will be pushing for big wage increases.

Such ingredients as an expanding economy and big wage increases probably could be accommodated without inflation. But, add the costs of an escalated war and it becomes a volatile mixture that could explode into inflation.

Here Comes the Mailman

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Some six million Americans suffer from sinus trouble.

Only 37 per cent of motorists say they "always" wear seat belts on trips of 25 miles or less from their homes. Yet it is within this radius that four out of five traffic accidents occur.

It has been estimated that one out of 19 U.S. citizens spends $50 a year on unnecessary vitamins or fadish health foods. On the other hand, a medical scientist warns that wives may lose a husband by giving him an inadequate breakfast: "The poor breakfast may lead to a higher divorce rate because it increases irritability."

Why you should be careful of camp fires: it takes an acre of healthy forest 20 years to provide enough lumber to build a five-room home.

A court in Michigan found that 50 cats are too many for a person to keep in an apartment, and told the owner to get rid of all but two.

What is probably now the most popular of all vegetables in the United States? It is the tomato, which is technically a fruit. During colonial times it was called "the love apple," and widely regarded as poisonous.

Quotable notables: "Man wants a great deal here below, and woman even more." — James Thurber.

A Canadian bank tried to lure women depositors by offering perfumed checkbooks. But they'll never make anything that smells better to most people than good old cash.

Uncle Sam is the world's greatest record keeper. Each year the federal government adds about 175 billion sheets of paper to its files.

Actor Eli Wallach says, "If you want to know the value of money, just try to borrow a buck from your teen-age son."

Why do new cars have to be called back to the factory? Experts explain that cars have an average of 15,000 parts, and each part has some 100 characteristics to be tested. That means there are 1.5 million chances for error in every car that comes off the assembly line.

Approximately 50 per cent of America's working population now carry their lunch to work.

Americans still take 34 million pounds of snuff a year. It is popular with employees in factories where smoking would be dangerous.

Ma Si-Tson, who has been regarded as Red China's foremost musician, has fled to the United States for sanctuary. Ma had the very best of reasons for his move—he found life in that Commie country most inharmonious.

Ma, it seems, simply got fed up with Marxism, Leninism, Maism and all that kind of jazz.

The didoes of Mao's Red Guard were something else Ma, a noted composer - violinist couldn't string along with.

After months of mistreatment at the hands of the Chinese Commies there can't be any question as to what Ma now regards as the sweetest piece of music he ever has heard—it's "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Try and Stop Me

A RESIGNED prisoner, in for a twenty-year rap, suffered some injuries in the shop and had to undergo abdominal surgery in the prison hospital. Back on his feet, he was summoned by the warden.

"It says in this report," said the warden with a scowl, "that you had two toes amputated and also lost three fingers in an accident in the shop. I gather, too, that they just removed your appendix. Well, let me tell you this, smart guy," he concluded with a roar. "You're not putting anything over on me. If you believe you can sneak yourself out of this jail a piece at a time, you've got another think coming!"

Speaking of YOUR HEALTH...

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

A heart-warming story was reported in the newspapers recently. A small child had fallen into a pond and, even though he was brought out quickly, he seemed to be lifeless. An elderly man immediately took charge and breathed life into this youngster, doing it with dispatch and knowledge of the technique.

He later said, "I never expected to use it, but I'm most grateful that I had learned how to do mouth-to-mouth resuscitation." He further said, "Saving this boy's life was a gift granted to me that I will treasure for the rest of my life."

Almost everyone can learn the simple, basic rules that may prevent a calamity and save a life. The basic principle is simple. Mouth-to-mouth resuscitation forces the rescuer's breath and oxygen into the lungs of the victim and keeps him alive.

These are the steps to be taken:

- (1) Place the victim on his back face up. Loosen belts, ties, girdles and other constrictions.
- (2) Be sure that the victim's mouth is empty and the tongue has not fallen back into the throat. Tilt the victim's head back as far as possible and pull the jaw upward.
- (3) Open the mouth if possible. When the jaws are rigid and tight, separate the lips. In this way air can be forced between the teeth by the rescuer's breathing.
- (4) Now take a deep breath and place your mouth securely over the victim's mouth and forcefully blow your life-saving oxygen into him. Repeat this cycle rhythmically and regularly at your normal breathing rate.

For an adult blow about 12 to 18 times per minute. For a small child blow more gently and more quickly, about 20 times a minute.

The rescuer must remain calm and continue this procedure without hurry. If he breathes too deeply or too rapidly he may become dizzy and exhausted. When possible, more than one person should relieve each other to avoid fatigue.

If you feel uncomfortable about direct contact with the mouth of the victim cover it with a handkerchief. The air will get through.

(5) While doing this, be sure that there is no leakage of air through the victim's nose. For through the victim's nose. For together. With a child, both the nose and the mouth can be covered by the rescuer's mouth, giving full advantage of all the oxygen.

(6) Send for professional help as quickly as possible, but do not leave the victim to do so. The resuscitation must continue uninterrupted.

Do not stop or become discouraged if the victim does not respond quickly. A doctor may give stimulating drugs in addition to this method of artificial help. Drugs, however, are not nearly as important as the air you are breathing into him.

The key points to be remembered are: don't delay, send for help, tilt the head far back, lift the jaw upward and begin mouth-to-mouth aid immediately.

You, too, may share the joy of saving a life if you are prepared to do so.

When you recover from a disease think of yourself as healthy, not as an invalid.

Friend at Chase Manhattan

By John Chamberlain

Nothing is simple. It was only a few weeks back that a story appeared in the papers about an agreement between the Cyrus Eaton interests of Cleveland and the Rockefeller family to seek new ways of exploiting East-West trade. The "Rockefeller," of course, are, among other things, the Chase Manhattan Bank. If the Soviets had found a friend at the Chase Manhattan, they were presumably "in." And, to those of us who think it would be a mistake to extend any out-of-the-ordinary long-term credits to a totalitarian government with a deplorable record for double-dealing, this could have meant the ball game.

The Soviets' presumed "friend at the Chase Manhattan," however, turns out to be a most canny fellow who does not believe in indiscriminately casting his bread on stormy waters. Recently the Chase polled 500 academic economists on the idea of relaxing curbs on trade with the Communist East. Four out of five of the economists were for increased trading with the Russians and the East European satellites. Three out of five thought some dealings with Red China should be permitted. Strangely, almost half of the economists based their recommendations on political considerations, not economic. They were moving out of their field into the mysterious realm of diplomacy, which economists do not normally study.

George Champion, the chairman of the Chase Manhattan board, went up to Middlebury College in Vermont recently to tell the students he was rejecting the economists' politicalized advice.

"By definition," he said, goods and services... But the Communists seem more interested in buying Western goods than Western goods. They want to import manufacturing units with special emphasis on chemical complexes, automobile plants and the like. To me, this is a strange concept of trade, and raises a question of what we could expect to get in return. I would be very much surprised if we wanted the Russians to build us a few MIG factories here in New England or another Aswan dam... Our own natural resources, together with those of Canada and other Free World nations, have usually been sufficient to accommodate our needs. Russian exports to the U. S. have been largely restricted to... caviar and vodka... Altogether our exports to the Communist world run about $200 million a year, less than one per cent of total U. S. exports. Even if restrictions were eased, it is doubtful that this trade would increase substantially...

So, in Mr. Champion's estimation, if the Soviets are to bet chemical complexes and automobile plants, they must, as he put it, seek "long-term credit — eight years on one deal, fifteen years on another." Mr. Champion told the students that "Buy now" has become a Communist slogan, "Pay later" a Communist habit. In view of the risks involved, little long-term credit would be extended unless Western governments provided companies with firm guarantees — in other words, unless the taxpayers vouched for the credits. Now some may call this "trade," but it looks to me suspiciously like economic aid, and enables the Communists to divert resources to military production and international subversion."

In short, Mr. Champion, as the representative of the Chase, is saying, "Include me out." He isn't taking advice from economists who are trying to double as experts on politics. And he isn't picking up any government bills for "economic aid." If the Russians want to trade, he says, they should try to narrow the "confidence gap" by dealing with others on a "normal trade basis." Let them "open their books and explain fully the extent of their resources, their reserves, their balance-of-payments situation, and their short- and long-term commitments... If Russia's ultimate objective remains to overthrow our system of government and economics, it would obviously be folly for us to build that country up through long-term credit."

If Lyndon Johnson wants to extend economic aid to the Communists for diplomatic reasons, he should have it out with Congress on that basis. But, as one private citizen, this columnist would rather see his tax money go to Brazil, or Kenya, or the Maldives Islands than to any of the nations that are sending those MIGs and rockets to the North Vietnamese. I would very much like to see Mr. Champion, as my own chosen friend at the Chase, go to Washington to clear up a few Senators' minds on these matters.

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor:

From time to time, particularly during the tax filing period, a few individuals make public statements expressing their view about Federal Income Taxes.

We are most fortunate to live in a country whose constitution guarantees the privilege of freedom of speech. It is unfortunate, however, when a few individuals in exercising this right make statements which can be misleading and, if not carefully examined, might persuade people to lose confidence in the administration of public laws, including our Federal Tax laws.

Some individuals are heard to say that they neither file a return nor pay income taxes and in fact encourage others to do likewise. Others say they file an income tax return but do not include their tax payment. Actually these individuals do pay the full tax for which they are liable and the public should know that they do.

However, because of the strict statutory provisions which rightfully protect the tax matters of an individual from disclosure, individual cases cannot be discussed.

People making these statements generally fall into one of the following categories:

- (a) Those who do not have sufficient income to incur a tax liability.
- (b) Those who pay by means of taxes withheld from their wages, and
- (c) Those who do not remit payment with their tax return, but either pay it upon receipt of the first notice of tax due, or include a note stating where the money is on deposit for tax collection.

97 per cent of the income tax in the United States is voluntarily reported and paid. This is a tribute to the integrity and patriotism of the American citizen which is unmatched by any other country in the world.

This overwhelming majority who believe in supporting a government which insures their freedom should know that those few individuals who say they feel no such obligation are dealt with firmly and in no way escape the payment of income tax when a tax liability is incurred.

Public confidence in the integrity of our tax system and in equitable enforcement of the tax laws is an invaluable asset that must be protected, preserved and maintained. In order that the hundreds of thousands of conscientious taxpayers in our Cincinnati District will not be misled by the statements of a few, I want to assure them that we in IRS are dedicated to administer and enforce the Federal Tax laws in such a manner as to merit their confidence and respect.

ANTIQUES IN AN ANTIQUE — An old red barn has been, in part, converted by two energetic young ladies into a most charming antique shop. Shown here are some of the articles on display.

The Yesterday Shop Sure To Attract Many Visitors

By MRS. MARION SINES

A red barn, old fashioned goodies and two girls with a hobby add up to The Yesterday Shop, an establishment specializing in antiques.

The shop, located five miles east of Circleville off the Stoutsville Pike. It could be a favorite haunt this year.

Low beamed ceilings and wide plank floors make a charming setting for country furniture and numerous articles of yesterday.

The business is a partnership formed by Carol Stevens and Lucy Hosterman. However, as the girls will quickly explain, the shop would have been an impossibility without the support and encouragement of their husbands, Nelson Stevens and Charles Hosterman.

Although the business officially began during the Antique Show at Pumpkin Show last year, the shop has just opened in the red barn. The building is well over 100 years old, having belonged to Mrs. Stevens' great-grandfather.

The young women have taken one end of the barn and converted it into the shop.

For a new business there are many interesting items on display such as some good cherry drop-leaf tables a copper boiler and many other small items that catch the eye.

Both Lucy and Carol possess a lifelong interest in antiques. The enthusiasm was fostered by their families.

If the barn doors are not open when you call, stop at the home with the sign in front. Lucy or Carol will be happy to share their hobby with you.

Ohio Legislature

Fight Is Anticipated On Provision of Bomb Bill

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—An emergency bill to help police cope with possible summer race riots by outlawing firebombs neared passage in the legislature today but a fight was expected on a key provision.

Three members of the Senate Judiciary Committee indicated they would seek a Senate floor amendment taking out of the bill a so-called "possession with intent" provision.

Sens. John W. Bowen R-15 Columbus, William B. Nye D-28 Akron and Calvin C. Johnson D-9 Cincinnati opposed the provision which would make it a felony to possess ingredients "with intent" for the making of firebombs.

They pointed out that ingredients for such bombs consist only of a match, a rag and inflammable liquid and asserted that possession of such common items could result in arrests of innocent persons.

Aimed at curbing rioting and violence such as occurred last summer in Cleveland and Dayton, the bill would make it a felony to manufacture, sell, distribute or possess materials for firebombs often described as "Molotov cocktails."

Conviction could bring 1-5 years in the penitentiary.

Each house passed four bills Monday night as the lawmakers started their 18th and what shaped up as one of the busiest weeks of the session. Stepped-up House hearings on the administration's $4.9 billion two-year operating budget and auditions for three dozen proposed state songs were among activities on tap.

A brief flurry of debate preceded passage Monday night of a bill to increase penalties for distributing or selling obscene literature to minors. An 84-3 vote sent the measure to the Senate following objections that it would do nothing to strengthen present "ineffective" laws which leave the definition of obscenity up to courts.

But Rep. Ethel G. Swanbeck R-14 Erie, a co-sponsor, insisted that obscenity "is obvious enough to be recognized by any adult" and told the House "I hope you will support this bill and define it as you will."

Opponents were Reps. Margaret Dennison R-98 Trumbull, Robert C. Carpenter R-15 Seneca and Edwin T. Hofstetter R-36 Geauga.

Under the bill, fines would range from a minimum of $500 to a maximum of $5,000, up from the present $200 and $2,000. The minimum prison term would jump from one to two years although the present maximum of seven years would remain unchanged.

By a vote of 83-6, the lower

Girl, 19, Shot Outside Tavern

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Mary Ann Allen, 19, Dayton, was gunned down outside a west side tavern on Monday and police arrested another girl, 17, for investigation of the fatal shooting.

Detective Sgt. Jack Peake said witnesses told of the two girls arguing in two bars and the gunplay came after they walked out of the second one.

The younger girl allegedly pulled a weapon provided by two adults—not identified by officers, who arrested them also—and the Allen girl was shot in the left chest. She was dead on arrival at a hospital.

Another Union Joins Strike Against AGC

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Another trade union joined the weeklong strike Monday against the Central Ohio Chapter of the Associated General Contractors (AGC).

Park Pixley, executive secretary of the AGC, said marble, tile and terrazzo workers failed to report for work Monday morning after negotiations broke down Friday night.

The strike by six unions has almost completely halted construction work on about $100 million worth of projects in the Columbus area.

Around the state, Federal Mediator H. J. Montoney met with both the heavy construction workers and the Ohio Contractors Association but the meetings produced no basis for a formal bargaining session.

The strike by the operators union has tied up many millions of dollars worth of highway and other construction work throughout the state.

Urban School Development Commission Established

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—A Commission on Urban School Development, federally financed and with broad responsibility powers for helping cities solve their mounting educational problems, was created by the State Board of Education Monday.

"This won't be just window dressing or a study group of delay action," State Supt. of Public Instruction Martin Essex assured.

He said it would investigate curriculum, occupational and vocational programs, school planning, use of recreation areas for school training and establishment of supplementary centers for arts and sciences.

The commission also will deal with the problem of urban racial imbalances in schools "although this isn't the central reason for its establishment," Essex said.

To be set up by midsummer, the commission of 11 members—laymen and school officials—will work with a salaried consultant.

If successful, it could lead to eventual creation of a separate state department of education for city schools, Essex said.

The state superintendent told the board that two-thirds of Ohio's 2,230,000 public school children live in cities, 25 percent in the eight metropolitan centers.

"They have borne the brunt of the complex problems of population mobility, unemployment and cultural change," Essex said. "With the fourth largest school enrollment in the nation, Ohio cannot afford to jeopardize future progress and economic development by avoiding its urban challenges." In other action at its regular monthly meeting, the board re-allocated $1 million in unspent federal funds to 368 school districts for operation of summer programs for disadvantaged children.

The board was told during Monday's session that Ohio is providing special education programs for only 175,000 of the 850,000 children who could benefit from such classes for the handicapped, slow learners or exceptionally bright.

"We need 1,000 more professional people annually to work in special education," said S.J. Bonham, director of the Division of Special Education. The most critical shortages are of school psychologists and speech and hearing therapists, he said.

Among other business, the board:

—Approved formation of a joint vocational school district including Clinton, Fayette and Highland counties. Planned is a $2.4 million school providing 30 vocational courses for 900 to 1,000 students. A .64-mill levy and federal funds are proposed to finance the new school.

—Received a report from board member Ward Miller of Portsmouth on foreign language training in Ohio. Although enrollment in language classes has doubled since 1958, Miller reported, the percentage of students participating has gone only from 24 to 29 percent. Schools offering four years of language, he said, had increased from 37 to 156 since 1957.

—Increased transfer of 25.6 acres from Clay Local School District in Scioto County to Portsmouth city schools.

Fight Is Anticipated On Provision of Bomb Bill

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—An emergency bill to help police cope with possible summer race riots by outlawing firebombs neared passage in the legislature today but a fight was expected on a key provision.

Three members of the Senate Judiciary Committee indicated they would seek a Senate floor amendment taking out of the bill a so-called "possession with intent" provision.

Sens. John W. Bowen R-15 Columbus, William B. Nye D-28 Akron and Calvin C. Johnson D-9 Cincinnati opposed the provision which would make it a felony to possess ingredients "with intent" for the making of firebombs.

They pointed out that ingredients for such bombs consist only of a match, a rag and inflammable liquid and asserted that possession of such common items could result in arrests of innocent persons.

Aimed at curbing rioting and violence such as occurred last summer in Cleveland and Dayton, the bill would make it a felony to manufacture sell distribute or possess materials for firebombs often described as "Molotov cocktails."

Conviction could bring 1-5 years in the penitentiary.

Each house passed four bills Monday night as the lawmakers started their 18th and what shaped up as one of the busiest weeks of the session. Stepped-up House hearings on the administration's $4.9 billion two-year operating budget and auditions for three dozen proposed state songs were among activities on tap.

A brief flurry of debate preceded passage Monday night of a bill to increase penalties for distributing or selling obscene literature to minors. An 84-3 vote sent the measure to the Senate following objections that it would do nothing to strengthen present "ineffective" laws which leave the definition of obscenity up to courts.

But Rep. Ethel G. Swanbeck R-14 Erie, a co-sponsor, insisted that obscenity "is obvious enough to be recognized by any adult" and told the House "I hope you will support this bill and define it as you will."

Opponents were Reps. Margaret Dennison R-98 Trumbull, Robert C. Carpenter R-15 Seneca and Edwin T. Hofstetter R-36 Geauga.

Under the bill, fines would range from a minimum of $500 to a maximum of $5,000, up from the present $200 and $2,000. The minimum prison term would jump from one to two years although the present maximum of seven years would remain unchanged.

By a vote of 83-6, the lower

Girl, 19, Shot Outside Tavern

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Mary Ann Allen, 19, Dayton, was gunned down outside a west side tavern on Monday and police arrested another girl, 17, for investigation of the fatal shooting.

Detective Sgt. Jack Peake said witnesses told of the two girls arguing in two bars and the gunplay came after they walked out of the second one.

The younger girl allegedly pulled a weapon provided by two adults—not identified by officers—who arrested them also—and the Allen girl was shot in the left chest. She was dead on arrival at a hospital.

chamber passed and sent to the Senate a measure that would give the Ohio Board of Regents authority to approve community college boards of trustees from seven members to nine and stipulate that three trustees must be named by the governor.

Rep. George V. Voinovich R-53 Cleveland said the measure would give the regents more authority in their master plan for higher education but at the same time guarantee local control by county commissioners.

Also approved by the House was a measure increasing the horse racing season in border counties competing with tracks in neighboring state. It would permit racing in those counties between March 1 and Nov. 1.

Another Union Joins Strike Against AGC

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Another trade union joined the weeklong strike Monday against the Central Ohio Chapter of the Associated General Contractors (AGC).

Park Pixley, executive secretary of the AGC, said marble, tile and terrazzo workers failed to report for work Monday morning after negotiations broke down Friday night.

The strike by six unions has almost completely halted construction work on about $100 million worth of projects in the Columbus area.

Around the state, Federal Mediator H. J. Montoney met with both the heavy construction workers and the Ohio Contractors Association but the meetings produced no basis for a formal bargaining session.

The strike by the operators union has tied up many millions of dollars worth of highway and other construction work throughout the state.

Urban School Development Commission Established

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—A Commission on Urban School Development, federally financed and with broad responsibility powers for helping cities solve their mounting educational problems, was created by the State Board of Education Monday.

"This won't be just window dressing or a study group of delay action," State Supt. of Public Instruction Martin Essex assured.

He said it would investigate curriculum, occupational and vocational programs, school planning, use of recreation areas for school training and establishment of supplementary centers for arts and sciences.

The commission also will deal with the problem of urban racial imbalances in schools "although this isn't the central reason for its establishment," Essex said.

To be set up by midsummer, the commission of 11 members—laymen and school officials—will work with a salaried consultant.

If successful, it could lead to eventual creation of a separate state department of education for city schools, Essex said.

The state superintendent told the board that two-thirds of Ohio's 2,230,000 public school children live in cities, 25 per cent in the eight metropolitan centers.

"They have borne the brunt of the complex problems of population mobility, unemployment and cultural change," Essex said. "With the fourth largest school enrollment in the nation, Ohio cannot afford to jeopardize future progress and economic development by avoiding its urban challenges."

In other action at its regular monthly meeting, the board reallocated $1 million in unspent federal funds to 368 school districts for operation of summer programs for disadvantaged children.

The board was told during Monday's session that Ohio is providing special education programs for only 175,000 of the 850,000 children who could benefit from such classes for the handicapped, slow learners or exceptionally bright.

"We need 1,000 more professional people annually to work in special education," said S.J. Bonham, director of the Division of Special Education. The most critical shortages are of school psychologists and speech and hearing therapists, he said. Among other business, the board:

—Approved formation of a joint vocational school district including Clinton, Fayette and Highland counties. Planned is a $2.4 million school providing 300 vocational courses for 900 to 1,000 students. A .64-mill levy and federal funds are proposed to finance the new school.

—Received a report from board member Ward Miller of Portsmouth on foreign language training in Ohio. Although enrollment in language classes has doubled since 1958, Miller reported, the percentage of students participating has gone only from 24 to 29 per cent. Schools offering four years of language, he said, had increased from 37 to 156 since 1957.

—Increased transfer of 25.6 acres from Clay Local School District in Scioto County to Portsmouth city schools.

Today in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says that if the North Vietnamese believe the reports they're getting from the Viet Cong, Ho Chi Minh must expect a Communist victory any day now.

Pentagon sources said Monday that captured Viet Cong documents — intended for the North Vietnamese leadership — told of 88,000 U.S. troops killed in the first nine months of 1966.

That would have been about one-fourth of all U.S. troops in South Vietnam at the time, the sources said. And they said Defense Department casualty figures for the same nine-month period showed 3,558 Americans killed — compared to 41,000 Communists.

Pentagon sources gave excerpts from the documents to back up earlier U.S. claims that the Viet Cong deliberately understate its battle losses while exaggerating American casualties.

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFL-CIO President George Meany denies his giant labor federation ever received money from the Central Intelligence Agency to finance overseas labor programs.

Meany told a Monday news conference here that: "As far as I know, during my term of office as secretary treasurer of the AFL and president of the AFL-CIO, neither organization has ever received any money either directly or indirectly from the CIA."

He was responding to a Saturday Evening Post article by Thomas W. Braden, Oceanside, Calif., editor and publisher who said he was in charge of the CIA program which fought the spread of communism in Europe by financially backing the overseas activities of U.S. labor and education groups.

Braden's assertion in the same article that he gave $50,000 to President Walter P. Reuther of the AFL-CIO United Auto Workers in the early 1950s to help German trade unions has been conceded by Reuther.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., has introduced a resolution calling for renaming the old Senate Office Building the Harry S. Truman Building in honor of the former president, whose 83rd birthday was Monday.

Colorado Gov. John A. Love has announced that the Republican Governors Association will meet June 29-30 at Jackson Hole, Wyo., with the agenda centering on federal-state relationships.

The Atomic Energy Commission says it has approved export of a small amount of radioisotope to the Iron Curtain nation of Bulgaria.

Circleville's Better Shoes

WASHINGTON (AP) — How did we ever get into the war in Vietnam? There are a lot of arguments about it. But the Senate Republican Policy Committee's staff report could have done a far better job explaining the origins than it did.

This report was supposed to provide Republicans with material for discussion in the hope they could reach agreement on what position to take. It did anything but. Almost immediately, instead of discussing, Republicans began arguing.

The report's main point is that the Democrats, under Presidents Johnson and John F. Kennedy, and not the Republicans under President Dwight D. Eisenhower, are the ones who sent U.S. fighting men into Vietnam.

That's true, but it's far from the whole story. The American involvement was a slow process, beginning with aid and ending with men. Presidents Eisenhower and Harry S. Truman, too, were part of the process.

In 1950 the French, without promising the Vietnamese freedom after holding them in colonial bondage almost 100 years, had been fighting for four years against Ho Chi Minh, a lifelong Communist, backed by Viet-doubt non-Communists and no doubt non-Communist Vietnamese intent on driving out the French.

By then the Chinese Communists had taken over all of mainland China. In 1950 the Korean War began. Truman began a policy of giving the French aid. This aid eventually cost billions of dollars.

Truman's constant theme was that the Communists were trying to take over the world. When he became president in 1953, Eisenhower continued the Truman aid policy. He shared Truman's fears about the Communist intentions.

He was particularly afraid that unless stopped, communism would gobble up all South east Asia. He explained it in a couple of ways. One was the domino theory: that if Vietnam fell to communism, the other Southeast Asian nations would follow. He put it another way: that Vietnam was the cork in the bottle.

He said he was bitterly opposed to sending U.S. troops into Vietnam. He said he would try to make sure it didn't happen. And under him it didn't happen. But he also said something else.

"No matter how the struggle may have started," he said, "it has long since become one of the testing places between a free form of government and a dictatorship. Its outcome is going to have the greatest significance for us, and possibly for a long time in the future." In 1954 Ho Chi Minh's forces forced the French into surrender. At Geneva the two sides agreed Vietnam should be divided into North and South, with Ho Chi Minh running the North, until 1956.

In that year the people of the two Vietnams would vote on a single government for all of them. But before then a new government had been set up in South Vietnam.

Neither this new government nor the United States was a party to the agreement. The United States supported this new government with aid and technicians. When 1956 came South Vietnam refused to let the elections take place. If it had, Ho Chi Minh almost certainly would have won.

The United States, under Eisenhower, continued to support the South. It seemed inevitable — and it turned out that way — that now the North Vietnamese Reds would try to take South Vietnam by force since they had been refused a chance to do it by ballot.

The war began on a small scale in the late 1950's and gradually got bigger. It seems reasonable, although some might wish to argue it, that since the United States backed South Vietnam, anxious as it was to stop the spread of communism, and continued to back South Vietnam after it repudiated the elections which made war inevitable, then the United States had an obligation to continue supporting it.

By the time Kennedy was in office awhile the war grew more intense. He sent some troops over. They weren't enough. South Vietnam seemed in danger of being engulfed by the Viet Cong and the North. Johnson then sent in hundreds of thousands of troops.

Both Kennedy and Johnson shared the Truman-Eisenhower fear that communism was on the march and had to be stopped.

POMONA

At the Spring session of Pomona Grange 26, held May 5 at the 4-H and Grange Building seven persons were accepted as members and given the ritualistic obligation by Harold Furniss. They were: Mr. and Mrs. Roger Schneider of Nebraska Grange; Elaine Judy, Robert Collins Jr. and Doyle Miller of Saltcreek Grange; Robert Lands of Washington Grange; and Mrs. Don Bidwell of Scioto Grange.

Greg Fraunfelder of Saltcreek Grange, who received Fifth Degree work at State Grange, was given official membership recognition.

Directed by Dorsey Bumgarner, master of both Mt. Pleasant and Pomona Granges, the members of Mt. Pleasant Grange served as host grange. Paul Dunkle of Saltcreek Grange served as piano accompanist for all musical inclusions.

The theme for the program as arranged by the lecturer, Mrs. Leora Sayre, was "Tribute For Whom and For What Tribute Is Due." Responses were arranged for the special May recognitions.

For the Grange Centennial Year, May is Church Month. The response for this was singing of "The Church's One Foundation" and a roll call of Church homes.

To recognize Music Week, Paul Dunkle, accompanied by Elaine Judy, sang a classical number "My Dearest Love". For a musical version more popular or modern, Doyle Miller presented "Climb Every Mountain" by piano.

As a special tribute to mothers there was a tabulation of the total number of mothers as well as the oldest and the youngest mother and the mother of the most children. Of the 23 mothers present, Mrs. Corilla Pontius was recognized as having had the most birthday anniversaries. Mrs. Hazel Peters was the mother present with the most children. The youngest mother, Mrs. Schneider, and her daughter, Mary Jane, each modeled complete costumes of cotton structured for the National Grange sewing contest.

For Mental Health Week, Mrs. Kenneth Beach gave a recipe for mental health, and attention was called to the Pickaway County Mental Health Assn. and the policies and procedures designed for the benefit of those in need of opportunity to gain confidence of self and recognition in their community.

New Facts On Dodd Are Disclosed

NEW YORK (AP) — Investigators of the Senate Ethics Committee have evidence that Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., carried on his payroll an official of a Stamford, Conn., firm that was seeking the senator's support in securing government contracts, the New York Post reported Monday.

In a Washington dispatch, the Post named Albert P. Morano, a former Republican congressman from Greenwich, Conn., as the official of the Conetta Manufacturing Co.

Morano told the Senate investigators that he quit the company before joining Dodd's staff the Post said.

The newspaper said Senate records revealed that Morano had been paid more than $25,000 since joining Dodd's staff in August, 1962. He was reported to still be on the senator's payroll.

Dodd's former administrative assistant, James Boyd, was quoted by the Post as saying that Morano did nothing but arrange loans and campaign contributions for Dodd and urge Dodd to persuade the Defense Department to award Army weapons contracts to Conetta.

Early in 1965, the Defense Department dropped Conetta as manufacturer of trigger assemblies for the Army's M14 rifles and Morano and Conetta's president, Louis D. Conetta, asked Dodd to intervene on the company's behalf, which he did, the Post said. The defense Department reconsidered its action, according to the newspaper report.

A most deserving highlight of the evening was recognition of The County Grange Youth Drill Team. Directed by the county youth leader, Paul Dunkle and accompanist, Mrs. Ernest Bidwell, the following presented the drill which won for the group first, place in State competition: Marjorie Kaiser, Elaine Judy, Doyle Miller, Robert Collins Jr., Greg Fraunfelder, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Judy, Mr. and Mrs. Orban Burchwell, Mr. and Mrs. Don Bidwell, Eddie Crites, Robert Lands, Judy Rinehart, Harold Furniss, and Beverly McKenzie.

Good Posture Week was given recognition during the session. During the business portion of the evening, Deputy Master Wayne Luckhart announced that Logan Elm Grange was now closed. Properties of this Subordinate Grange were accepted by Pomona.

For the youth department, Dunkle explained present and future endeavors planned and stated that entries were acceptable for the several possible talent contests. He urged each Subordinate Grange to send at least one member to Youth Camp in August.

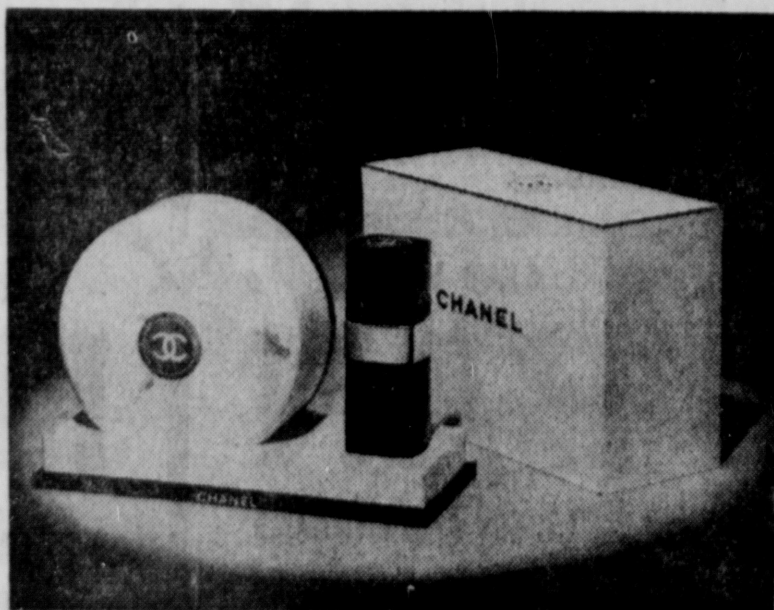

The Secretary, Mrs. Dorsey Bumgarner, read responses from Legislative representative Frank Lausche, Stephen Young, and William Harsha, which agreeably acknowledged Resolutions sent in behalf of Pomona 26.

Details were given of Hospital Day at Veteran's Administration Hospital, Chillicothe, at which time this "City of Care" would be given historic and deserving recognition.

Due to County Fair conflict, the Summer Session of Pomona was advanced to August 11th. Mrs. Wayne Luckhart, home economics chairman called attention to the home economics contest to be held.

'Inner City' Group Hopes To Serve Dual Purpose

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A group of civic and culture-minded citizens have banded together for a dual purpose: to bring good theater to the masses and to provide opportunity in the arts for members of minorities.

The group is called the Inner City Cultural Center, and it has been made possible by the federal government's recent discovery that culture can be a national asset. Through a joint grant of the National Endowment for the Arts and the Department of Education, the center will establish a repertory company which will stage classic plays for Los Angeles school children.

The plays also will be presented on weekends to the general public at nominal admission fees.

The cultural center, which was founded by its president, Dr. J. Alfred Cannon, has launched a drive for necessary funds that are not provided by the government. A neighborhood movie house, the old Fox Boulevard, has been leased, and $125,000 is needed for renovation. Another $125,000 is being sought for the center's program to develop young talent.

Heading the fund drive is Gregory Peck, an actor who takes his civic responsibilities seriously. He explained the background of the Inner City Cultural Center.

Pulitzer Judges Of Reporting Never Saw Winner

NEW YORK (AP) — A member of the journalism jury that screened entries for the 1967 Pulitzer Prize in national reporting said Monday the five-man panel "never saw" the entry of the ultimate winners—Stanley W. Penn and Monroe W. Karmin of the Wall Street Journal.

Paul Sann, executive editor of the New York Post, said columnists Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson were the unanimous choice of the jury, not only for their series on the financial affairs of Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., but also for their disclosures involving the actions of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., as chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee.

Newsweek magazine reported Sunday that the Pulitzer Prize Advisory Board had rejected the jury's recommendation.

Writing in the Post today, Sann said he did not know until last Monday, when the awards were announced, "that a given jury might actually find itself engaged in a pure charade having no bearing whatever on the awarding of a Pulitzer Prize."

Too Big Too Small?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sam Lucchese, who said he is President Johnson's bootmaker, says the President has complained that his shoes are too tight but Lucchese thinks they may be too big, failing to give proper arch support and resulting in "a burning sensation on the bottom of his feet."

"I have been a member of the board for two years, and it is inter-racial, including Negroes, a Japanese-American and a Mexican-American. The area that will be served is almost entirely Negro, and the center fills a decided need. As you know, there is no theater in Watts. The Boulevard can easily be reached from there—Watts is only five minutes away."

Peck said the Los Angeles theater would be the third in an experimental program called Project Discovery.

"The other theaters are in Providence, R.I., and in New Orleans," he explained. "They are in operation now. I have visited both of them, and they are absolutely first class. Each year they present four fine plays of the classical repertory free of charge to high school students."

Logan Elm Cage Mentor Accepts Delaware Post

By STEVE JONES

Keith Merrin, Logan Elm High School's head basketball coach and athletic director since the inception of the school, has resigned to accept a similar post at Delaware Hayes High School.

KEITH MERRIN

Merrin's resignation became official last night after his employment was announced by the Delaware board of education. The Logan Elm board immediately began seeking applicants to fill the vacancy left by the highly successful cage mentor's resignation.

Coming to Logan Elm shortly after his graduation from Capital University, Merrin has never had a losing season as basketball coach. He was captain of the Capital cage team his senior year.

During the past season his games-won record passed the century mark. Logan Elm varsity hardwood quintets have posted 106 victories through the years while losing only 40.

INCLUDED among the fine teams he has produced at Logan Elm are two district co-championship units, three Scioto Valley Conference Champs including the co-championship this season, during the five year history of the SVC.

When he first came to Logan Elm, Merrin also served as head football and head track coach.

His football teams had an overall record of 34 wins and ten losses, winning one SVC championship. His track teams have one Pickaway County track crown to their credit and one SVC crown.

In announcing his decision to accept the cage coaching position at Delaware Hayes, Merrin said:

"The coaching job there presents a real challenge. It will be a rough first year."

Merrin will be faced with a rebuilding situation at Delaware. Never a basketball power, the varsity squad there lost 17 games while winning only two this past year. The reserve squad posted a 5-13 season.

DIM as the outlook may be for the immediate future, Merrin feels the situation will not always remain that way.

The freshman squad won 14 of 18 games, and the junior high cage squad just lost one game.

Farrell Is Sent Home to Phillies

HOUSTON (AP) — Fun-loving Dick Farrell is returning to the scene of some of his biggest thrills — on the field and off.

The veteran right-handed reliever was sent to the Philadelphia Phillies by the Houston Astros Monday in a straight cash transaction, some estimates placing the figure as high as $75,000.

It's a return home for Farrell, 33, who signed with the Phils in 1963 and was 10-2 for them in 1967 before being dealt to the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1961.

CHS Swingers Down Fenwick In 7-2 Match

The Circleville golf team defeated Lancaster Bishop Fenwick, 7-2, Monday in a dual meet at Valley View Country Club near Lancaster.

Greg Peck was the Tiger medalist sharing the honor with G. Snook of Fenwick. Both golfers carded three over par scores of 39.

Peck scored two points for the Tigers. Mike Young toured the course in 41 strokes for the Tigers, but was playing against Snook and scored no points.

Pete Noble, shooting in the number four slot on the team, had a 42, good for two points. Billy Adkins also picked up two points with his 45.

FOR BISHOP Fenwick, Timmes had 42, P. Powers a 55 and P. Sheridan a 51.

Circleville's team total was 167 compared to 197 for Lancaster.

The next match for the Tigers is Wednesday at Washington Country Club. Saturday, the South Central Ohio League meet is scheduled at Snow Hills Country Club, Wilmington.

Two Top Ten Batters Face McDowell

CLEVELAND (AP) — Two of the Top Ten batters in the American League will face the Cleveland Indians' Sam McDowell tonight in the first of two games against Detroit, the league leader.

Al Kaline, the Tigers' 32-year-old outfielder, leads the league in batting (.392), home runs (6) and RBI (16). Catcher Bill Freehan is sixth with a .317 average, four homers and 15 runs batted in.

Kaline has batted safely in 18 of Detroit's 20 games and the Tigers have won three straight, six of their last seven and 10 of 14.

McDowell (2-0) will oppose the Tigers' Dennis McClain (2-3) as Cleveland tries to break a batting slump. The Indians have been shut out 16 consecutive innings, lost two in a row and four of their last five.

New Tiger, Manager Mayo Smith has the same material from last year but shifted Dick McAuliffe to second base and installed Ray Oyler at shortstop.

Smith's new coaching staff includes Johnny Sain handling the pitchers; Hal Naragon, Tony Cuccinello and Wally Moses.

Sain has been given much credit in helping the Tigers' hurlers, both rookies and veterans.

"I learned a lot about being a pitcher, not just a thrower, from him," said Joe Sparna, who has a 3-0 record and a 2.51 ERA.

Clay Considers Bouts Abroad To Finance Case

HOUSTON (AP) — Under indictment for refusing to be inducted into the Army, stripped by domestic boxing groups of his world heavyweight title, a laughing, confident Cassius Clay today planned bouts abroad to finance his court fight against Selective Service.

Although no contract for a foreign match has been signed, Clay is known to be considering at least three, all against old opponents.

He may fight George Chuvalo in Montreal before Expo '67 is over, Floyd Patterson in Tokyo within the next two months or Karl Mildenberger in Stockholm before the summer is out.

Clay was indicted Monday by a federal grand jury in Houston, the adopted hometown where he was called as a draftee April 28 but refused to take the oath, explaining that he was Muslim minister Muhammad Ali and, as a man of the cloth, exempt from military duty.

It was DeWitt, who sold the Reds this year to a group of Cincinnati businessmen, staying on as a "consultant," who spoke up at the draft meeting in Columbus, Ohio, last December and said:

ABA's Mikan Optimistic About Circuit

NEW YORK (AP) — George Mikan, commissioner of the American Basketball Association, is optimistic about the future of his new, 11-team circuit despite the recent acquisition of college All-Americans Jimmy Walker and Bill Bradley by clubs in the rival National Basketball Association.

"We tried for them but they took the NBA," Mikan pointed out. "You have to remember, though, that in football the National Football League had the best draft choices but the American League still came up with a good product."

Walker, former Providence star, was drafted by Indianapolis of the ABA and Detroit of the NBA. He signed a four-year contract for a reported $250,000 with the Pistons. Bradley, the Princeton All-American, came to terms with the New York Knicks of the NBA for an estimated $500,000 over four years.

"Our teams have now signed about 70 players, including free agents and those from the colleges and the NBA," Mikan estimated.

The latest NBA player to move to an ABA team was Ervin Mueller, 6-foot-8 center and forward for the Chicago Bulls. His signing by the New York entry of the fledgling league was announced Monday.

has helped put the Reds in first place in the National League pennant race.

Abernathy by far has the best record of any relief pitcher in the majors this season.

The underhand throwing Abernathy has an earned run average of 2.45 with nine saves and one victory in 14 appearances for the Reds — not bad for a pitcher nobody wanted last year.

The Reds moved into first place by winning 12 of their first 16 games and over that stretch, Manager Dave Bristol used Abernathy 10 times.

The Reds, idle Monday, take on the New York Mets tonight in the first of a three game set with rookie phenom Gary Nolan 21, slated to hurl against New York's Jack Fisher, 12.

Bristol happily noted that the Reds appear to have shaken a brief hitting slump, except for Leo Cardenas. The skinny shortstop has only two hits in his last 25 at bats and has stranded six runners in scoring position.

If Nicklaus Isn't First, Place Doesn't Worry Him

HOUSTON (AP) — Big Jack Nicklaus, who's having the slowest start of his career on the golf tour this year, plays with one basic philosophy: "If I can't win, I don't care where I finish."

When Nicklaus shoots himself out of contention for victory, which has often been the case this year, his mind switches to the next stop, even though two rounds may remain.

"I start thinking about what I can do to win the next one; how I can improve," he said.

"After all, at the end of the year, it's how many firsts you had that really counts."

"Don't get me wrong, though. I always play as well as I can," Nicklaus explained. "If you don't, you're letting your game slip. All I'm saying is that I play to win. If I don't win, whether I finish fifth or 25th makes me no difference."

What has happened to the 27-year-old Columbus, Ohio, miracle man who in less than six years as a professional has won over half a million dollars? All of a sudden, his name barely makes a dent in the weekly official money list.

"I hate to complain, but in golf you have good and bad streaks that come and go," he said. "I'm having a bad streak of putting... missing some short putts. I'll come back."

Each of the last four years, Nicklaus has won more than $100,000, peaking in 1965 with $140,752. He has won the Masters three times.

This year, though, he didn't even make the 36-hole cut at the Masters and has pocketed only $14,862 in official money a third of the way through the 1967 tour.

In his last five outings, he tied for 34th in the Jacksonville Open, 31st at Pensacola, missed the cut at the Masters, tied for fourth in the Tournament of Champions and last week slipped to 37th in the Houston Champions International.

"It's really not as bad as it looks when you look at the unofficial winnings too," Nicklaus noted, pointing out that he began the year with a victory in the Bing Crosby National, not an official PGA tournament.

He's not among the top 20 official money winners, but is eighth in total earnings with $36,192.

Mel Queen, who failed to make the Cincinnati Reds as an outfielder, is now trying to make the grade as a pitcher. He owns a good fastball and a slider.

Logan Elm Cage Mentor Accepts Delaware Post

By STEVE JONES

Keith Merrin, Logan Elm High School's head basketball coach and athletic director since the inception of the school, has resigned to accept a similar post at Delaware Hayes High School.

Merrin's resignation became official last night after his employment was announced by the Delaware board of education. The Logan Elm board immediately began seeking applicants to fill the vacancy left by the highly successful cage mentor's resignation.

Coming to Logan Elm shortly after his graduation from Capital University, Merrin has never had a losing season as basketball coach. He was captain of the Capital cage team his senior year.

During the past season his games-won record passed the century mark. Logan Elm varsity hardwood quintets have posted 106 victories through the years while losing only 40.

INCLUDED among the fine teams he has produced at Logan Elm are two district co-championship units, three Scioto Valley Conference Champions including the co-championship this season, during the five year history of the SVC.

When he first came to Logan Elm, Merrin also served as head football and head track coach.

His football teams had an overall record of 34 wins and ten losses, winning one SVC championship. His track teams have one Pickaway County track crown to their credit and one SVC crown.

In announcing his decision to accept the cage coaching position at Delaware Hayes, Merrin said:

"The coaching job there presents a real challenge. It will be a rough first year." Merrin will be faced with a rebuilding situation at Delaware. Never a basketball power, the varsity squad there lost 17 games while winning only two this past year. The reserve squad posted a 5-13 season.

DIM as the outlook may be for the immediate future, Merrin feels the situation will not always remain that way.

The freshman squad won 14 of 18 games, and the junior high cage squad just lost one game.

Farrell is Sent Home to Phillies

HOUSTON (AP) -- Fun-loving Dick Farrell is returning to the scene of some of his biggest thrills -- on the field and off.

The veteran right-handed reliever was sent to the Philadelphia Phillies by the Houston Astros Monday in a straight cash transaction, some estimates placing the figure as high as $75,000.

It's a return home for Farrell, 33, who signed with the Phils in 1953 and was 10-2 for them in 1957 before being dealt to the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1961.

Among the schools in the league is Mt. Vernon, Merrin's high school alma mater. Other loop schools are Worthington, Whitehall, Gahanna Lincoln, Westerville, Pleasant View and Reynoldsburg.

Delaware is located in the central district. Merrin and his wife Sue have three children, Gregory, Laura and Sherri. They live at 565 Springhollow Road.

The Merrins plan to move to Delaware sometime this summer.

CHS Swingers Down Fenwick In 7-2 Match

The Circleville golf team defeated Lancaster Bishop Fenwick, 7-2, Monday in a dual meet at Valley View Country Club near Lancaster.

Greg Peck was the Tiger medalist sharing the honor with G. Snook of Fenwick. Both golfers carded three over par scores of 39.

Peck scored two points for the Tigers. Mike Young toured the course in 41 strokes for the Tigers, but was playing against Snook and scored no points.

Pete Noble, shooting in the number four slot on the team, had a 42, good for two points. Billy Adkins also picked up two points with his 45.

FOR BISHOP Fenwick, Timmes had 42, P. Powers a 55 and P. Sheridan a 51.

Circleville's team total was 167 compared to 197 for Lancaster.

The next match for the Tigers is Wednesday at Washington Country Club. Saturday, the South Central Ohio League meet is scheduled at Snow Hills Country Club, Wilmington.

Two Top Ten Batters Face McDowell

CLEVELAND (AP) — Two of the Top Ten batters in the American League will face the Cleveland Indians' Sam McDowell tonight in the first of two games against Detroit, the league leader.

Al Kaline, the Tigers' 32-year-old outfielder, leads the league in batting (.392), home runs (6) and RBI (16). Catcher Bill Freehan is sixth with a .317 average, four homers and 15 runs batted in.

Kalinine has batted safely in 18 of Detroit's 20 games and the Tigers have won three straight, six of their last seven and 10 of 14.

McDowell (2-0) will oppose the Tigers' Dennis McClain (2-3) as Cleveland tries to break a batting slump. The Indians have been shut out 16 consecutive innings, lost two in a row and four of their last five.

New Tiger, Manager Mayo Smith has the same material from last year but shifted Dick McAuliffe to second base and installed Ray Oyler at shortstop.

Smith's new coaching staff includes Johnny Sain handling the pitchers; Hal Naragon, Tony Cucinello and Wally Moses.

Sain has been given much credit in helping the Tigers' hurlers, both rookies and veterans.

"I learned a lot about being a pitcher, not just a thrower, from him," said Joe Sparma, who has a 3-0 record and a 2.51 ERA.

Clay Considers Bouts Abroad To Finance Case

HOUSTON (AP) — Under indictment for refusing to be inducted into the Army, stripped by domestic boxing groups of his world heavyweight title, a laughing, confident Cassius Clay today planned bouts abroad to finance his court fight against Selective Service.

Although no contract for a foreign match has been signed, Clay is known to be considering at least three, all against old opponents.

He may fight George Chuvalo in Montreal before Expo '67 is over, Floyd Patterson in Tokyo within the next two months or Karl Mildenberger in Stockholm before the summer is out.

Clay was indicted Monday by a federal grand jury in Houston, the adopted hometown where he was called as a draftee April 28 but refused to take the oath, explaining that he was Muslim minister Muhammad Ali and, as a man of the cloth, exempt from military duty.

Ted Abernathy Helped Put Reds in First Place

NEW YORK (AP) — William O. DeWitt, former Cincinnati Reds owner heavily criticized for trading slugger Frank Robinson to the Baltimore Orioles, now seems in line for praise.

It was DeWitt, who sold the Reds this year to a group of Cincinnati businessmen, staying on as a "consultant," who spoke up at the draft meeting in Columbus, Ohio, last December and said:

"Cincinnati claims pitcher Ted Abernathy from the Richmond club of the International League."

ABA's Mikan Optimistic About Circuit

NEW YORK (AP) — George Mikan, commissioner of the American Basketball Association, is optimistic about the future of his new, 11-team circuit despite the recent acquisition of college All-American Jimmy Walker and Bill Bradley by clubs in the rival National Basketball Association.

Bradley, the Princeton All-American, came to terms with the New York Knicks of the NBA for an estimated $500,000 over four years.

"Our teams have now signed about 70 players, including free agents and those from the colleges and the NBA," Mikan estimated.

Maris Goes to Kindergarten

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Roger Maris, who once earned his Ph. D. in home run hitting, has started the learning process all over and now is one step closer to earning a promotion to first grade.

Maris, inserted into the St. Louis lineup as a pinch hitter in the ninth inning Monday night, rapped a runcoring double with two out in the 10th inning, climaxing a three run rally and giving the Cardinals a 6-5 victory over Pittsburgh.

It was one of the biggest of the 17 hits Maris has had this season, his first in the National League after 10 years in the American.

"This is like starting kindergarten all over again," the 32 year old slugger said, thinking of everything he would have to learn about the new league after the New York Yankees traded him to St. Louis.

And as long as he was starting over again, Maris decided he'd like to do things different ly. "Maybe I'll destroy that home run image," said the man who experienced virtually nothing but trouble after hitting 61 homers in 1961. "All I want are base hits. I've got some good hitters like Orlando Cepeda, Tim McCarver and Mike Shannon behind me."

The left-hander hasn't hit any homers this season, but five doubles and one triple help make up his .270 batting average.

And he was right about the hitters he mentioned. Cepeda's single helped the Monday night's game 3-3 in the ninth, and Shannon and McCarver each singled across a run before Maris delivered his clutch double.

In other NL games, San Francisco whipped Chicago 9-2 and Los Angeles topped Houston 4-2.

In the American League, Washington defeated Minnesota 7-4 and California nipped New York 3-2.

At the time, Maris' RBI appeared to be only an insurance run, but it proved decisive when pinch hitter Manny Jimenez socked a two-run double in the Pirates' half of the 10th. Larry Jaster prevented Pittsburgh from tying the game, coming on to get the last two outs.

Juan Marichal pitched a four-hitter for his fourth straight victory after three consecutive defeats at the start of the season. The San Francisco ace received support from Willie Mays, who hit a homer, and Tom Haler, who drove in three runs with two doubles and a single.

Ron Fairly was the big man for Los Angeles against Houston, knocking in three runs with a double and a pair of singles. He also curiously was thrown out at the plate twice trying to score.

Claude Osteen needed help from reliever Ron Perranoski for his fourth victory against one defeat.

Palazzolo Family Plans Its European Invasion

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The Paul J. Palazzolo family — all 13 of them — are invading Europe this summer.

Palazzolo, operator of a doughnut company, will take off next week with his wife, seven sons and four daughters on a four-month trip that will range from Iceland and Ireland to Sicily and back north to Copenhagen.

"We have been planning this for a long time," Mrs. Palazzolo said shortly before a farewell party given by her neighbors. "I can hardly remember what we did before we got started on all the preparations."

The Palazzolo children range in age from 1 to 17 and the family plans to do most of its traveling in a Volkswagen bus they will pick up at Dublin.

The Palazzolos wrote hundreds of letters to set up the trip. Their itinerary includes an audience with Pope Paul VI, an interview with President Asgerl Asgerlsson of Iceland, a party with the Vienna Boys' Choir and taking part in an antique car parade to Lucerne, Switzerland.

"We took a trip to Europe six or seven years ago and stayed for two months," Mrs. Palazzolo recalled. "Just my husband and I. We missed the children so much we realized that if we ever made a trip again, we'd have to take them all along."

"This is just about the best time for such a trip," she added. "We can still all go together. In another couple of years, my boys will be in college and we would not be able to go as a whole family."

In response to the obvious question about the Volkswagen bus, Mrs. Palazzolo said with a laugh, "Yes, we'll fit in it. We rented one a couple of weeks ago and drove up to Detroit to visit a relative. It was just fine."

Did Gradual Escalation Stiffen Enemy Resolve?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many military men believe gradual escalation of U. S. bombing hardened the North Vietnamese psychologically and steeled them to a long war.

These uniformed professionals feel the bombing's impact on the North Vietnamese will to fight would have been more telling if American planes had been free from the start to hit at a wide range of targets.

They also contend the long-standing immunity granted to some kinds of targets enabled the North Vietnamese to concentrate air defenses around targets they figured eventually would be hit — and that this has raised the cost in U. S. planes and lives.

Generally, these military men argue that the U. S. policy has added up to too little, too late.

Bit by bit, civilian authorities have been approving targets long urged by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

This has prompted military professionals to claim the service chiefs were thinking way ahead of the civilians.

Civilian policy makers hold that any drastic, widespread offensive against North Vietnam might have propelled Red China and the Soviet Union into the war.

This same fundamental concern until now has deterred authorities in the White House and Pentagon from allowing American bombers to strike at the docks and harbor of Haiphong, North Vietnam's chief port.

The civilian leaders fear such strikes — or the mining of the approaches to the harbor — could lead to sinking of Soviet vessels and bring on a dangerous confrontation with Moscow. There has been a marked toughening of U. S. government attitudes toward North Vietnam and a broadening of targets to include some which were free from attack for more than two years.

Reports have circulated recently that the Johnson administration may be reviewing its no-bombing policy with regard to Haiphong's harbor and dock area, the inlet for at least two-thirds of North Vietnam's military and civilian supplies.

Mining or otherwise blocking of Haiphong harbor has been near the top of the Joint Chiefs' list of preferred actions against North Vietnam for considerably more than a year.

Military officers point out that the Joint Chiefs wanted to destroy the petroleum storage, pumping complex and oil stocks in the Haiphong area for many months before such attacks were authorized by President Johnson last June.

The delay, these military officers claim, gave the enemy time to disperse much of his oil supplies into the countryside in fuel drums, and to muster a fleet of barges to haul petroleum to shore from tankers.

The top-level decision to allow the bombing — started last month — of some of the fields harboring North Vietnam's MIG jet interceptors still falls well short of what Air Force and Navy air authorities believe should be permitted.

Court Decides Girlie Magazines Not Obscene

WASHINGTON (AP) — What ever may be the Supreme Court's going definition of obscenity — and there are about as many definitions as there are justices — Monday's ruling in this highly subjective area makes one thing clear: Girlie magazines are not obscene.

Undoubtedly this is cheering news for champions of First Amendment rights and for sellers of such spicy publications, just as it is displeasing to those who consider girlie magazines corrupting.

But perhaps equally significant is what the decision does not do: lay down a rule on whether retailers may be prosecuted under state obscenity laws when they claim they were largely unaware of a suspect publication's contents.

And the court's definition of obscenity is no clearer than it was in March 1966, the last time it delivered major pronouncements on the subject and upheld the conviction of Eros magazine publisher Ralph Ginzburg.

The convictions of Robert Redrup, a New York City newsstand operator who sold two racy paperbacks to a policeman, and of William Austin, who sold girlie magazines in his Paducah, Ky., bookstore, were thrown out Monday because a majority of the justices found their prosecutions in conflict with the First Amendment.

At least four different constitutional views of obscenity were presented in the unsigned opinion, but none was singled out as controlling in the Redrup and Austin cases.

Similarly, the court barred Arkansas from prohibiting circulation of eight girlie magazines, but the opinion trained no particular concept of obscenity on the Arkansas action.

Actually, when the court took on the cases more than a year ago it specifically refused to pass judgment on whether the magazines and the two paperbacks were legally obscene.

Instead, it said it would decide procedural issues, including the question of knowledge of contents.

The court acted then, it said Monday, "upon the hypothesis that the material involved in each case was of a character described as obscene in the constitutional sense."

"But," it said, "we have concluded that the hypothesis upon which the court originally proceeded was invalid." In other words, the magazines and the two paperbacks, "Shame Agent" and "Lust Pool," cannot constitutionally be held obscene.

There were two dissenters, Justices John M. Harlan and Tom C. Clark. In an opinion in which Clark joined, Harlan declared: "These dispositions do not reflect well on the processes of the court, and I think the issues for which the cases were taken should be decided."

Such a decision awaits another day.

Court Throws Out 3 Convictions Of Obscenity

WASHINGTON (AP) — Distributors of spicy books and magazines won new protection in the Supreme Court Monday from prosecution.

After pondering obscenity convictions from three states for seven months the court, in a surprise move, not only threw out the convictions of the distributors but said the material is protected by constitutionally guaranteed free speech. The vote was 7 to 2.

The unsigned court opinion noted the varying views on legal obscenity among the justices and did not say which position was held controlling in the three cases.

But, it said in all three, seven justices have concluded that distribution of the publications "is protected by the 1st and 14th amendments from government suppression, whether criminal or civil."
